HOOVER FORCES FIND MINNESOTA LIKELY TO BOLT

Farm Unrest Turns State from G. O. P.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The tide of public sentiment is running strongly against President Hoover in Minnesota. Even the Republican managers have just about given up hope of carrying the state next November, although Minnesota's electoral vote has never gone to a Democratic candidate for President.

There is abundant testimony to the effect that the farmers, the village tradesmen, and the unemployed of the iron range and the cities are going to vote a collective grouch on the party in power as the imagined author of their economic ills.

At the same time there is evidence that Gov. Roosevelt's Topeka speech is appealing most persuasively to the farmers whose desperation one Republican leader measured by the fact that even conservative farm owners are joining in the "farmer's strike." None of the farm organization leaders, much less the farmers themselves, knows just what the Topeka speech means except that it proposes some new agrarian panacea, wherefore its author is being hailed as a new Moses by the tillers of the soil.

Many Surmises Made.

Some think the Roosevelt plan is a revival of the McNary-Haugen bill, equalization fee and all; others that it squints in the direction of the export debenture scheme; others that it embraces the domestic-allotment plan, and still others that it is a combination of all three.

The Topeka speech is to be made the lever for bringing the Farmer-Labor party, the powerful if not dominant party of the state, to the support of Roosevelt. State Senator Emil L. Regnier, Farmer-Labor campaign manager, has called a meeting of the party's state committee to indorse the Topeka speech.

"Personally I favor the election of Roosevelt and I believe that 98 per cent of the members of the Farmer-Labor party will vote for Roosevelt," said Senator Regnier. "The Topeka speech is the soundest proposal for farm relief that has ever been put forward by a candidate for the presidency."

"Just what is the proposal?" I asked.

"That is a question I don't care to answer at this time," replied Mr. Regnier.

Never Strong for Hoover.

Mr. Hoover never was popular in Minnesota, and his agricultural policies have made him still more unpopular. The Minnesota farmers were strongly in favor of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill, which he aggressively opposed. The Minnesota delegation went to the Kansas City convention for Lowden, arch-protagonist of McNary-Haugenism. The unpopularity of a presidential foe of McNary-Haugenism had been demonstrated in 1924 when Mr. Coolidge, who vetoed the bill, carried Minnesota by a majority of only 26,000 over La Follette and Davis, compared with Harding's plurality of 376,000 in 1920. Mr. Hoover carried the state by 164,000, due largely, as one Republican publicist put it, to the "outpouring of Lutherans to vote against the pope."

Mr. Hoover's alternative to the McNary-Haugen bill was tried and pronounced a failure. The farmers cannot see that the stabilization operations in wheat left them any better off than they were before. The village tradesmen, dependent on the farmers for a living, take the same view. In addition, almost the entire business community of Minneapolis which revolves around the grain trade was arrayed against the Hoover policies by the destructiveness to the grain trade of the farm board operations.

Contributions Held Up.

So antagonistic has been the attitude of the big business men of Minneapolis and St. Paul to the administration for this reason that they declined to contribute to the Hoover campaign fund even the mites they might have spared in these hard times.

Of late, however, particularly since the President's acceptance speech, a softening of the business element toward Mr. Hoover has been noted and recorded in the shape of some moderate contributions. Republican leaders think the business men realize that while the Hoover farm policies have hit them hard, Roosevelt's schemes would hit them harder.

The anti-Hoover sentiment in the

GERMANY BOLTS DISARM PARLEY; BUILDS UP NAVY

Orders New Warship Laid Down.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—Having turned her back on the international disarmament conference, Germany is making an active bid to restore her power at sea. The admiralty today announced that construction on the republic's third "vest pocket battleship" will begin on Oct. 1.

The admiralty issued the order for laying of the keel of another one of the 10,000 ton cruisers, said to be as efficient as a battleship of twice the size, a few hours before the government made public the text of a note notifying the disarmament conference that Germany would not be represented at next Wednesday's session.

The government, which demands equality in arms, explains its action by stating that efforts to obtain an agreement on the equality issue at Geneva have failed.

Ships Within Treaty Limits.

Germany's new cruisers are within the limits specified by the Versailles treaty, but, because of numerous improvements developed by German naval experts, these vessels are said to be much more formidable than the treaty contemplated.

In the meantime, the admiralty is putting the finishing touches on Germany's first "vest pocket battleship," the Deutschland, for its first real cruise from Kiel harbor—the war port of former Kaiser Wilhelm. The Deutschland was laid down in 1928 and was launched May 31, 1931. The second vessel of this type was laid down at Wilhelmshaven on June 25, 1931, and will be completed in 1934. Construction of a fourth "battleship" will begin next year.

This squadron will make Germany the absolute master of the Baltic, the German ships being far superior to the obsolete pre-war dreadnaughts of soviet Russia and the smaller Scandinavian navies.

The "vest pocket battleships" cost about $17,850,000 each.

Hull Electrically Welded.

The Deutschland is said to be able to circumnavigate the world at low speed without refueling. At an average speed of 20 miles an hour the ship has a cruising radius of 10,000 miles. Its "featherweight" Diesel engines, weighing only 16 pounds per horse power, generate 50,000 horse power, giving the ship a maximum speed of at least 26 knots. The ship's hull is electrically welded, thereby achieving a great reduction in weight.

Though displacing only 10,000 tons, the armament of the Deutschland is far superior to any war vessel of equal tonnage. It carries six 11 inch guns, eight 6 inch guns, four 3.4 inch anti-aircraft guns, and four 20 inch torpedo tubes, making the ship more than a match for any "London treaty cruiser." The 11 inch guns have attained a maximum range of 22 miles at an elevation of 50 degrees.

Already the Deutschland has deeply influenced foreign naval policy. France has given up the construction of 10,000 ton "treaty cruisers" and has laid down a battle cruiser of 26,000 tons in direct reply to the construction of the "vest pocket battleships."

Heads Self Out of Parley.

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Germany read herself out of the world disarmament conference today as a further step in her campaign to eliminate the arms restrictions placed on her by the treaty of Versailles. The effect of this move was to bring before all the great powers the controversy over the military status of the reich, in which hitherto Berlin and Paris had been the principal parties.

As a result of the German action, the conference steering committee must devise some means of satisfying the Berlin demand or decide whether to proceed with the disarmament parley without participation by any German representatives.

Germany's position was made clear by publication of a letter sent by Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath to Arthur Henderson, chairman of the conference. This communication was formal notification that the Berlin government would be unrepresented at Wednesday's meeting of the bureau.

Urges One Standard for All.

The Von Neurath letter set forth the German contention that in disarmament there should be one standard for all nations.

"Only one solution of the disarmament problem can be considered, namely that all states should be sub-

HIEROGLYPHS FOUND IN INDIA LINKED TO SOUTH AMERICAN ISLE

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Identification by the French savant, Guillaume de Hevesy, of hieroglyphic script estimated to be 6,000 years old which was found recently in India by Sir John Marshall, reveals that much of it corresponds exactly to inscriptions on tablets found on Easter Island, off the Chilean coast. This disclosure was contained in a paper read today by Paul Pelliott before the French Academy of Sciences.

Sir John unearthed a hitherto unknown pre-Aryan civilization in the Indus valley at Mohenjo-Daro and Arappa. He found splendid buildings and many artistic achievements and hieroglyphics which nobody was able to translate until they were turned over to Prof. de Hevesy, an eminent professor of physics, who has lectured at Cornell and Stanford universities in the United States.

Prof. de Hevesy's identification raises the question whether the Mohenjo-Daro men were Polynesians. He contends that the Easter Island and Mohenjo-Daro scripts undoubtedly originated from the same source. Apparently human script first reached the acrophonic stage [the stage of using the hierogryph] in Mesopotamia, Prof. de Hevesy declares, and all hieroglyphics, including the Egyptian, Minoan, Sumerian, and Proto-Elumitic probably, were derived from that origin.

Beer College to Revive Art of Fine Brew

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The most exclusive institution of higher learning in the east will reopen its doors early in October with a blue ribbon enrollment. The college has no football team, no band and no fraternities, but it is likely that a glee club will be formed this semester.

The United States Brewers' academy which has been offering instruction in the fine art of beer making to a hand-picked student body since 1882 with the exception of the dark days during the Volstead era has seen an omen in the renewed activities about the breweries and has recalled its professors to their chairs.

Applications Keep Coming.

The academy's 38th fall term will begin with an all time record enrollment, as more than thirty students have matriculated and new applications are coming in with every mail. It is not easy to get into the beer college, however, as the lore it has to dispense is only for sons of brewers and veteran beer makers who have spent ten years among the vats.

The college is in no sense a school for home brewers. It looks toward finer things and invites only the professional brew master to come and learn the secrets of beer making. In the past the academy has interested such benefactors of mankind as Gustav Pabst, August A. Busch, George Ebret and the Trommers and the Doelgers. Now heirs of men like these are bid to come and do their noble experimentation in a 100 per cent American beer laboratory.

Started 50 Years Ago.

Fifty years ago Antone Schwarz enrolled the Academy's first class in the Old Brewers' Exchange building and American beer began to taste better. The venerable Austrian chemist has passed on, but the school has remained a family heritage and now is conducted on East 44th street by two grandsons, Robert and Herbert Schwarz. A son of old Antone, Frederic Schwarz, is editor of the beer industry's mouthpiece, the American Brewer.

J. F. LIVERMORE'S WIFE WINS RENO DIVORCE; REWEDS

Reno, Nev., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Dorothea F. Livermore was married here today to Walter Longcope, former "under cover" prohibition agent, five minutes after she obtained a divorce from Jesse F. Livermore, New York stock market operator. Judge Thomas F. Moran presided at both divorce and wedding.

WILL NOT PAY DEBTS OF WIFE, F. F. JELKE SAYS

New York, Sept. 17.—[Special.]—F. Frazier Jelke, head of the banking firm of Frazier Jelke & Co. and descendant of an old colonial family, announced in the public notices column of the New York Times today that he has not been for about one year and will not be hereafter responsible for any debts contracted by his wife, Mrs. Eugenia Woodward Jelke, to whom he was married Dec. 19, 1930. Mrs. Jelke is the niece of Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood of Washington, D. C., widow of the late United States senator from Alabama.

Mr. Jelke, a director of the Metropolitan Opera company, was said tonight to be in Europe. Mrs. Jelke was not reached. She is a daughter of A. H. Woodward, chairman of the board of the Woodward Iron and Steel company of Birmingham.

Mr. Jelke is the son of the late John F. Jelke of Chicago. In the world war the son served overseas with the United States marine corps and later as a liaison officer attached to the French army. The French government awarded him the decoration of the Legion of Honor in recognition of his services.

BRITISH FLYER ASCENDS 45,000 FEET; A RECORD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Capt. Cyril Uwins, Bristol pilot, broke the world's airplane altitude record today when he reached a height of nearly 45,000 feet. He beat the record of 43,168 feet set by Lieut. Apollo Soucek of the United States in June, 1930.

Uwins flew a 550 horsepower Pegasus Bristol plane and carried sealed barographs of the Royal Aero club. It was his fifth attempt to set a record. The barographs were removed for confirmation.

Uwins climbed for more than two hours. He used special oxygen pumping apparatus and electrically heated goggles, gloves, shoes and clothing when he encountered severe frost. After reaching nearly 45,000 feet, he was forced to descend when his gasoline supply ran short. He landed in a plowed field.

SHIP SPEEDING ILL ADMIRAL TO NAVAL HOSPITAL

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The battleship West Virginia, carrying its commander, Vice Admiral Joel R. P. Pringle, to the naval hospital in San Diego, passed Point Reyes today, radio advices stated, and expected to reach San Diego Sunday morning. Pringle, 59, next in line for the post of chief of naval operations, was stricken with an abdominal ailment while his vessel was in maneuvers in Puget Sound.

Ends His Life as Slain Wife Is Discovered

Plymouth, Mass., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Five hours after Charles E. Dubois, Plymouth and New York jeweler, killed himself today in Quincy by firing a bullet into his head, the body of his wife, missing since Aug. 10, was dug from underneath 18 inches of stone and concrete in the summer home of the couple here.

Dubois shot himself in a bathroom in a lodging house, where he had roomed for three days under the name of Ralph Anderson. He had stayed there in seclusion since his release Tuesday, when a charge of murdering his wife, laid against him by the local police, had been dismissed because her body could not then be found.

Capt. Daniel Doran of the Quincy police leaned over the unconscious man at the hospital from the time he was admitted until he died, but Dubois never regained consciousness.

Girl Linked to Case.

The suicide established the fact of the wife's murder by her husband to the state's satisfaction.

"Dubois' suicide is sufficient evidence of guilt for me," said John Sullivan, assistant district attorney of Norfolk and Plymouth counties, even before Mrs. Dubois' body was found.

Although there was little doubt that Dubois' motive had been to clear the path for his romance with Miss Grace Atwood of Middleboro, state authorities will continue their investigation. There was no indication, however, that Miss Atwood will be held responsible for any part in the slaying, the state apparently being satisfied she believed Dubois' statement that his wife had been killed in an automobile accident in Canada.

Quiz Dubois' Former Chauffeur.

State detectives, soon after the discovery of Mrs. Dubois' body, had Larry Frazier of Braintree, formerly chauffeur and handy man for Dubois, brought to them for questioning regarding the construction of the crypt under the cement floor of the summer cottage.

The finding was the climax of an extended search with nearly 100 national guardsmen, all acting as private citizens in the pay of Plymouth county, assisting more than two score state and Plymouth policemen.

Search of the camp buildings and the lake bottom and shore having failed to reveal a trace of the body sought, Sullivan's suspicions were aroused by considerable new construction around the great herring pond camp as a result of which he ordered all new work torn down.

Autopsy Reveals Bullet Wound.

The body was discovered beneath the concrete floor. A crypt of concrete had been fashioned. The body was wrapped in a black cloth which might have been a cloak, and had been laid in the crypt carefully with a pillow under the head.

An autopsy revealed that Mrs. Dubois had been shot with a .38 caliber revolver, the same caliber as the bullet which Dubois fired into his own head.

In the pockets of the coat Dubois was wearing when he killed himself were found newspaper pictures of his wife and a picture of Miss Atwood.

"Best Way Out," Says Girl's Father.

"I feel very sorry for the young man, but if the charges made by the state against him were true, this was the best way out for him," said Levy O. Atwood, wealthy box manufacturer of Rockland and the father of Miss Atwood.

"Grace took the news of Dubois' death very calmly when a member of her family telephoned it to her at the home of friends, where she is in seclusion," said her father. "I naturally tell that my daughter was a victim of circumstances and there is little for us to say."

Audit Shows Banks Hold Key.

Borrow on Insurance

When Middle West Utilities needed money badly, it borrowed $737,465 on the life insurance of 13 officers of the company. This was revealed yesterday in the report of the auditors. Middle West was the beneficiary of these policies totaling $3,370,172, which had a loan value of $737,465. The following table shows the amount of insurance carried on each official's life and the amount of money the company borrowed on each policy:

Insured—	Amount of insurance.	Amount of loan.
A. J. Authenrieth	$ 50,000	$ 9,400
A. H. Bickmore	400,000	86,701
E. A. Davis	50,000	5,270
C. J. Eaton	50,000	2,850
E. V. Graham	75,000	10,500
G. W. Hamilton	50,000	6,100
M. J. Insull	750,000	200,907

R. D. Stevenson	75,000	9,150
W. S. Wyman	250,000	25,225
Total	$3,370,172	$737,465

The report showed that the policies had a total cash surrender value of $771,154 and a net cash surrender value of $33,688.

(Picture on back page.)

The receivership audit of the Middle West Utilities, in which the public has invested $260,000,000, was filed in the United States District court yesterday.

JUDGE LINDLEY.

The audit, made by Arthur Andersen & Co., lists $308,505,713 of assets, but in most instances these are put down at "book value," instead of at liquidating value, so that the stockholders—98,870 of Middle West and 282,309 of its subsidiaries—are not given an estimate of the solvency of the corporation, nor an indication of the probable disposition of the properties.

Hurley Is "Optimistic."

Edward N. Hurley, one of the receivers, said that he is optimistic about the future of the properties and Charles A. McCulloch, another receiver, said he was hopeful.

Judge Walter C. Lindley, who appointed the receivers and ordered the report, said: "I believe that Middle West can be saved."

From other sources the impression was gained that the company can be held together as a going concern "if the bankers and noteholders will go along for a while."

The report of the auditors indicates some bad judgment in the purchase of utilities and millions risked—and lost—in stock transactions. It shows some "questionable" to "bad" debts; loans for purposes outside of the utility business, and certain investments bordering on speculative projects.

Reduces Book Values.

Because of these, Middle West reduced the book value of its assets $35,152,201 on Dec. 31, last, and the auditor's report indicates that millions more will have to be written off. Still, those in charge believe that the properties, excluding possibly those in the east and in New England controlled by the National Electric Power company, may be held together and continued as a utility system.

The audit says, in effect, that the bankers hold the key to the situation. They have loaned $35,010,281 and as collateral have securities of a book value of $100,574,202. In Receiver McCulloch's opinion, the banks have ample security.

Has Other Liabilities.

Other notes of the company total $8,294,625. They are secured by stocks and bonds totaling $26,034,780 book value. The accounts payable, together with accrued interest and federal taxes, total $38,793,893; and on securities borrowed Middle West is liable for $4,358,750. Another liability is estimated at $5,000,000 on securities loaned to others.

Altogether the company's liabilities, other than to note and stock holders, is represented as $48,157,643.

In 5 per cent gold notes there is $40,000,000 outstanding and the holders of these forced the receivership last April because the company could not pay $10,000,000 due on June 1.

The preferred and common stock holders represent an investment of $220,448,069.

To pay these liabilities the auditor's report shows assets of $308,505,713, but these—for the most part—are set down at "book value. The investments in and advances to other companies owned or controlled by the Middle West in 32 states total $244,569,438; but if there is a liquidation much of that will disappear. Of these securities $95,339,262 is pledged to banks to cover their loans of $25,010,000. Another $22,675,707 of these asset-investments is pledged to other noteholders and $894,014 has been loaned to other companies and individuals.

Stock In Other Companies.

In companies which are not controlled by Middle West it has $49,439,348 of securities of which $5,284,939 is pledged to banks for loans, $3,359,072 to other noteholders and $3,472,867 has been loaned to others.

As another asset the auditor has put down $2,463,970 for comon stocks to which Middle West has subscribed, which is more of a liability. Miscellaneous investments of $2,422,285 in power projects syndicates and the like are another listed asset. So the total investments, according to the audit, are $298,895,041.

Borrowed securities, which also look like a liability, are placed in the asset column for $4,358,750. The cash on hand and impounded totals $303,945, notes receivable are placed at $437,387, accrued interest and dividends receivable at $416,123, the accounts receivable at $3,273,140, and the unamortized debt discount at $821,318. In that way the $308,505,713 of assets are accumulated in the balance sheet.

Extensive Stock Operations.

But all through the report is evidence of extensive stock market operations, which took millions of assets out of the properties. The manager of the company, Martin J. Insull, president, and Marshall E. Sampsell, president of the largest operating company in the system, Central Illinois Public Service company, appear to have devoted much time to dealing in stocks.

The report on the Mississippi Valley Utility Investment company, filed Thursday, showed Martin Insull indebted to it on one transaction for $170,000 and on another for $66,000.

The report of Middle West shows a loan of 9,000 shares of Central and Southwest Utilities to Marshall E. Sampsell in September, 1931. Other than this Mr. Sampsell has no accounts owing the Middle West, according to the receivers, who added:

"However, within a day or two after the appointment of the receivers on April 15 last, it was ascertained that Mr. Sampsell, then president of the Central Illinois Public Service company, a subsidiary of the Middle West, in which he was a director, had taken from the Central Illinois company 4,000 shares of $6 preferred stock of that company, being reacquired stock held in the company's treasury, and in return had deposited his trust receipts.

Demand His Resignation.

"The receivers demanded and accepted the immediate resignation of Mr. Sampsell, and steps were taken for the protection of the Central Illinois Public Service company.

"Since that time 2,000 shares of this stock, which had been substituted for other collateral held on joint notes of Mr. Sampsell and Martin J. Insull, were acquired by the Central Illinois Public Service company through the purchase of these notes."

The receivers did not disclose how much was paid for these notes, nor why it was necessary to buy them. Their statement, however, says that the other 2,000 shares were put up by Mr. Sampsell "as collateral for bank loans," which they have been attempting to recover by negotiations. Proper claims have been filed with the bonding companies to protect the Central Illinois Public Service.

Transactions in securities appear to have been carried on in large figures by the company, itself, and the report, coupled with the reports on Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and the Mississippi Valley Utility Investment company, indicate that the one main purpose was to save the Insull Utility empire.

One result was that loans were sought. The loans obtained from the banks were as follows:

Bankers' Trust Co., N. Y.	$10,252,000
Central Republic, Chicago	1,972,978
Continental Illinois, Chicago	6,487,747
First National, Chicago	6,365,958
Total	$25,010,281

Other loans obtained were as follows:

General Electric Co., secured	$ 500,000
Halsey, Stuart & Co., secured	2,500,000
North American L. & P., secured	300,000
Utility Securities Co., secured	4,000,625
Illinois Northern Utilities, unsecured	200,000
Lincoln Printing Co., unsecured	8,000
Kansas Electric Power Co., secured	250,000
Kentucky Utilities Co., secured	150,000
Central Power Co., unsecured	118,000
The L. E. Myers Co., unsecured	203,000
N. W. Utilities Co., unsecured	25,000
Oklahoma P. & W., unsecured	40,000
Total	$ 8,294,625

Some of the unusual investments, which attracted the attention of the auditors was the investment of $750,000 in the stock of the People's Trust and Savings bank, which is now in voluntary liquidation. A total of 2,500 shares was purchased at $300 a share under an agreement of Aug. 5, 1931.

From the auditor's report it appears that the transaction was handled through the Public Service Trust, and the agreement provided that the stock could be repurchased within 18 months at $300 a share. This $750,000 investment was written down to $412,500 on the Middle West books as of Dec. 31 last.

After summarizing the profits in 1930 and 1931 on the sale of securities by the Middle West, the auditors report:

"A loss of $3,748,051 was sustained in the liquidation of certain brokerage accounts in 1932. Middle West Utilities corporation, Middle West Utilities Securities company, and Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment company had accounts with a number of brokers.

"The purchases in the brokerage accounts of the Middle West Utilities were mostly in the company's own common stock. As the value of this stock declined other securities were deposited in the accounts and when liquidated substantial losses were sustained."

In addition Middle West had loaned securities to the two affiliated companies which had been deposited with brokers. These were also sold.

Previous to that period some of the assets of the company had been "written down." Middle West made contributions to subsidiaries in order to permit them to "write down" some of their own investments.

Donates to Securities Companies.

To the Middle West Utilities Securities company Middle West donated $8,373,503, to Middle West Utilities corporation $182,507, to the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment company $3,868,538, and to the Allied Service company $1,250,000—an aggregate of $13,674,549.

Other security "write downs," charged to surplus, consisted of the following:

A. B. Leach & Co., notes receivable	$ 5,911,375
A. B. Leach & Co., common stock	129,750
Hill, Joiner & Co., common stock	1,326,339
Hill, Joiner & Co., preferred stock	136,139
Southwest Dairy Products Co., debentures	141,097
Pynchon & Co., liquidation account	170,301
Corporation Securities Co. and Insull Utility Investments, Inc.	495,180
Corporation Securities Co., common and preferred stocks	1,533,900
Insull Utility Investments, Inc., common and preferred stocks	853,744
Peoples Trust and Savings bank, capital stock	337,500
Special investment accounts	318,630
All others	266,715
Totals	$11,630,133

"The notes of A. B. Leach & Co. charged off," reads the audit, "represent cash advances made to that company in 1930 and 1931. One thousand shares of the common stock acquired Dec. 31, 1931, at a cost of $129,750 were also written off at the close of 1931." It was noted that the advance of $50,000 was made early in 1932 and this amount is included in notes receivable in the appended balance sheet."

Assumes Bank Loans.

The Leach company was a brokerage firm. Hill, Joiner & Co. dealt in securities. Regarding the "write-down" on the Hill-Joiner company the auditors report that 16,432 shares of common and 1,396 shares of prefered stock of Hill, Joiner & Co. acquired (by Middle West) at various dates were written off entirely Dec. 31, 1931. Subsequently Middle West Utilities company assumed certain bank loans of this company and acquired securities therefor."

The auditors report that these bank loans totaled $2,910,843. The securities acquired in that transaction were carried on the Middle West books in an account labeled "Hill, Joiner & Co. liquidation account." After prorating the securities obtained the audit report states that their market value on the date received was only $1,250,125.

Pynchon & Co. were in the security business. Corporation Securities and Insull Utility Investments were Insull companies in the investment trust business. The People's Trust and Savings bank since that writedown had liquidated.

In the miscellaneous notes receivable A. B. Leach & Co. are set down for $20,500 on one note and for $55,000 on another. Clement and George M. Studebaker made one loan of $250,000 and another for $50,000. Emery, Peck & Rockwood company owe $30,500.

Accounts of Employés.

In the miscellaneous accounts receivable, Receivers McCulloch and Hurley reported to Judge Lindley the amounts due from all persons connected with the company, under what was labeled "Officers and Employés' Accounts." This record shows that President Martin J. Insull owes Middle West 50 cents. M. K. Graham is charged with one cent and the amounts range up to $1,200.

But there are two exceptions. E. J. Knight, former secretary of Middle West, is shown to owe $186,891, and C. B. Ziegler, treasurer of the National Electric Power company—eastern subsidiary holding company—owes $372,702. Both of these accounts are collateralized by sundry preferred and common stocks.

Account in Name of Woman.

Regarding these two accounts Arthur Anderson & Co., the auditors, reported:

"Brokerage accounts taken from employés, stated at net cost to the company of $569,294, less a reserve of $318,630, represent the company's net expenditures in connection with the assumption of a brokerage account with Eastman, Dillon & Co., carried in the name of Miss Neave Minor, and an account previously assumed by Insull, Son Co., carried in the name of E. J. Knight.

"These accounts are designated on the company's records as 'Special Investment, New York,' and 'Special Investment No. 2,' respectively.

"We are informed that they were taken over by the company at the direction of Martin Insull.

"As to the first of these accounts we understand that Miss Minor was secretary to C. B. Ziegler, treasurer of the National Electric Power company, and that the account was carried for Mr. Ziegler in Miss Minor's name. The company records indicate that payments of $355,340.12 were made to Eastman, Dillon & Co. in November, 1929, and were carried in an account with Eastman, Dillon & Co. until Dec. 31, 1929. At that date the total was $355,340."

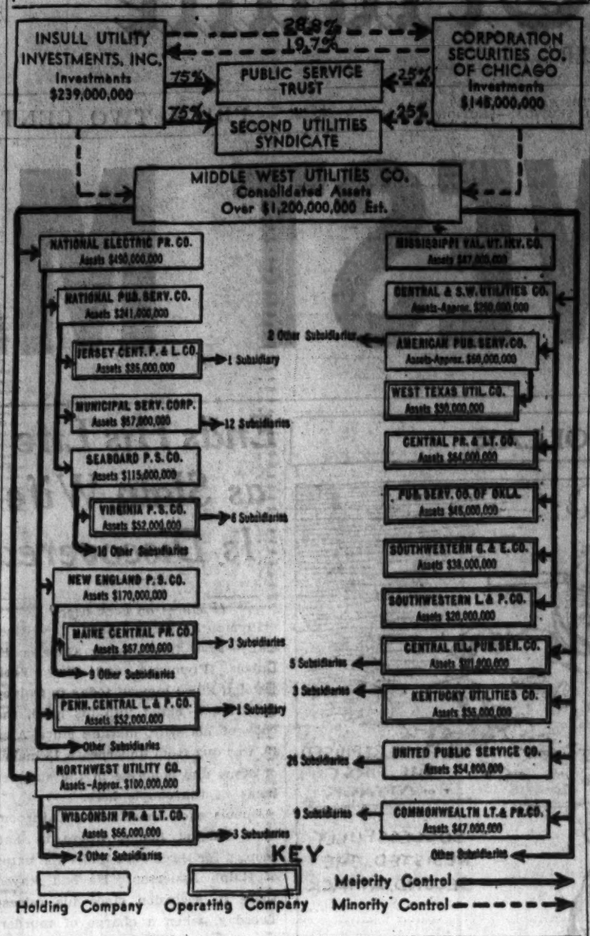
On this some payments were made, but added investments were also made, so that on April 14, when the receivers were appointed, the amount was $372,702. An explanation along the same line was represented to the court with reference to "Special Investment account No. 2."

After detailing the securities put up as collateral, the auditors made this general comment:

"We were informed that both of the above brokerage accounts were assumed by the company in order to protect the employés' position in the market as well as to prevent large blocks of Middle West Utilities company securities in the accounts from coming into the market.

"The company anticipates a substantial loss on these accounts and has provided a reserve of $318,630 in this connection."

Setup of Insull Utility Empire



Serves 30 States

The accompanying chart illustrates the setup of the Insull investment and holding firms and the corporate structure of the Middle West Utilities company.

By a 29 per cent interest in the voting stock of the Middle West company the two top investment concerns were able to exercise working control of a far flung utility system with estimated consolidated assets in excess of $2,400,000,000. The method by which Middle West was able to control its subsidiaries was through a system of sub-holding companies in which it held majority interest in the junior voting shares.

The top investment companies, Middle West and two of the latter's subholding concerns, National Electric Power and National Public Service, are now in receivership.

The operating units are not necessarily affected by the receiverships of the top companies. These operating properties are scattered through 30 states and reach into Canada. The business of the system ranges from investments in the textile and paper industry in New England to the operation of pipe lines and ice companies in Kansas, and the manufacture and sale of electrical and gas power in more than 5,000 communities.

The asset and investment figures shown in the chart are nominal values as carried in the books of the various companies. In the case of the investment companies they do not reflect the drastic deflation in the market value of their holdings. The figures given for these firms are based on the prices paid for their securities.

Bonds and notes outstanding against these properties have a face value of $692,000,000. Preferred stocks outstanding total $489,000,000, while the stated value of the common stocks in the hands of the public is nearly $300,000,000. The combined capitalization of all the properties approaches a billion and a half dollars.

INSULL REFUSES TO COMMENT ON NEW DISCLOSURES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Sept. 16.—Chewing nervously on a diminutive cigar, Samuel Insull listened today while newspaper men tried to draw from him comment concerning the revelations of the operations of his younger brother, Martin J. Insull, in the Insull utility and investment corporations.

The front page of the Paris edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, containing the latest disclosures from Chicago, was spread across his knee, and the fallen utility magnate's face did not flicker as reporters plied him with questions.

"It's no use. I have nothing to say," he said.

JUDGE LINDLEY O. K.'S SWANSON INSULL INQUIRY

State's Attorney John A. Swanson was given permission yesterday to examine records of the Insull corporations to determine if state laws have been violated. Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, before whom the receivers' reports have been filed, consented to the state investigation after a conference with the state's attorney in the federal building.

"I am glad to cooperate with the state," Judge Lindley said, "and I am sure the receivers also will be glad to aid in the state investigation. So far, no evidence of criminality has been brought to my attention. If it is I shall deem it my duty to refer it to the proper federal or state authorities."

Judge Lindley, as the court receiving the reports of the receivers, has the power to act as committing magistrate and to take direct action himself, attorneys pointed out.

State's Attorney Swanson announced following the conference that Assistant State's Attorney John Hampton, financial expert, would be assigned to the federal building to study the Insull records.

Meanwhile, Assistant State's Attorney Euclid Taylor, habeas corpus and extradition expert, has started the work of studying extradition treaties with France and England.

MAZE OF INSULL DEALS SUPPORTS MARKET PRICES

Corporate Trades Looked On as "Wash Sales."

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The more the deals and transactions of the Insull investment concerns and subsidiaries are studied the more involved and intricate they appear to be.

The interlocking of the corporations, the interlacing of stock transfers, the buying and selling, the borrowing and lending of securities and of money, the payments and repayments in cash and in stocks, the dealing and discounting in "rights" and warrants, the debts and the credits here and there, the profits and the losses, the changes in the system of reckoning—all these present a mass of transactions that is almost bewildering.

Wash Sales of Millions.

Out of the whole the impression is conveyed that the Insull companies "washed sales" by the millions this way and that with the apparent purpose of keeping up the market price of their own securities.

In the transactions were two principal corporations, the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and the Corporation Securities company, each with subsidiaries, affiliated and associated companies.

The Insull Utility Investments was incorporated Dec. 27, 1928, and the Corporation Securities Oct. 5, 1929.

Managed by Same Officers.

"Both companies were managed by practically the same officers, shared the same offices, and both had similar portfolios," reads the audit report of Arthur Andersen & Co., filed with Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

Each of these companies has a substantial investment in the capital stock of the other. Insull Investments—including the holdings of Insull, Son & Co., a wholly owned subsidiary—had 371,755 shares, or 50.11 per cent, of the $3 optional stock of Corporation Securities. Insull Investments also owned 675,273 shares, or 14.78 per cent, of the common stock of Corporation Securities.

Corporation Securities held 29,899 shares, or 59.83 per cent, of the $5.50 preferred; 95,626 shares, or 21.25 per cent, of the $6 preferred, and 963,706 shares, or 26.11 per cent, of the common stock of Insull Investments.

Other Investments Listed.

In addition to this intercompany relationship, Corporation Securities owned 25 per cent and Insull Investments 75 per cent of the outstanding stock of the Public Service Trust and of the Second Utilities syndicate. These subsidiaries also had investments in the stock of the parent companies, which may be summarized as follows:

The Public Trust owned 1,500 shares of the $6 preferred and 41,273 shares of the common stock of Insull Investments; 1,300 shares of the $3 optional preferred and 10,440 shares of common stock of the Corporation Securities.

The Second Utilities Syndicate owned 1,000 shares of the $6 preferred and 13,827 shares of the common stock of Insull Investments, and then 1,000 shares of the $3 optional preferred stock and 1,806 shares of the common stock of Corporation Securities.

Record of Cash Loans.

There were also cash loans. The Insull Utility Investments advanced $26,657,116 to Corporation Securities in 1930 and $2,204,996 in 1931. All of this was repaid in cash and securities. But later Insull Investments advanced $7,391,951 to Corporation Securities, of which $4,769,851 had not been repaid on April 16, when Judge Lindley appointed receivers for both corporations.

These loans were made on demand notes between July 1 and Nov. 2, 1931. The collateral given by Corporation Securities for these loans was 300,000 shares of Insull Investments and 205,000 shares of Middle West Utilities, valued as of Nov. 2, 1931, at $6,330,000, but only at $202,500 as of April 16 last, when the receivers were appointed.

Advances to Subsidiary.

Insull, Son & Co., wholly owned subsidiary which carried on much of the stock transactions for Insull Investments, also was advanced large sums. In the 3½ years this concern received $44,888,139. This money was for the purchase of stock for the Investments portfolio, and of the total advanced $40,436,745 had been returned when the receivers were appointed. The remaining $4,401,394 is one of the receivables of Insull Investments.

To the Public Service Trust Insull Investments advanced $2,962,765, of which $1,439,908 was repaid. That leaves $1,522,856 still owing Insull Investments from the Public Service trust.

Money was advanced to Opera Shops Building corporation and to the Chicago Music Foundation. The unpaid loans made to both total $351,783.33.

"The function of the Opera Shops Building corporation, which is controlled by the Chicago Music Foundation," reads the report of the auditors, "is to store sets, draperies, etc., for the Chicago Civic Opera company. The Chicago Music Foundation also owns the equity stock in the 20 Wacker Drive Building corporation, we are informed."

KANSAS ASKS FOR DISSOLUTION OF GAS COMPANIES

Governor Charges They Are Law Violators.

Topeka, Kas., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Gov. Harry H. Woodring late today directed Roland Boynton, attorney general, to institute court proceedings seeking dissolution of and appointment of receivers for the Cities Service company and its subsidiaries have been and are deliberately violating the corporation laws of Kansas.

Calls Them Dummies.

"It is clear from the astounding disclosures made in the record before me," Gov. Woodring said, "that this company's (Cities Service company) subsidiaries have and are deliberately violating the corporation laws of Kansas.

"They are operating as mere instrumentalities or dummies for the holding company. They have refused to keep in Kansas the money obtained from Kansas citizens, as provided by law, millions being sent back to New York each year, and the New York company has drawn money illegally from the subsidiary companies in order to bolster its finances in New York City. They also have refused to keep their offices in Kansas, as provided by law."

Here Is List of Companies.

The ten companies for which Attorney General Boynton was directed to seek receivers, were:

Wichita Gas company, Wichita; Hutchinson Gas company, Hutchinson; Newton Gas company, Newton; Pittsburgh Gas company, Pittsburgh; Capital Gas and Electric company, Topeka; Wyandotte Gas company, Kansas City, Kas.; Arkansas Valley Gas company, Arkansas City; Girard Gas company, Girard; Union Public Service company, forty-five towns, and Western Distributing company, twenty-seven town.

The chief executive also ordered filing of an action to oust the Gas Service company of Kansas City, Mo., from doing business in Kansas.

INDIANA HALTS SALE OF GARY LIGHT CO. BONDS IN INSULL QUIZ

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Interlocking relationships of Insull holding and operating companies in Indiana and the method of their financing held the attention of the Indiana public service commission here today. The commission issued an order stopping sale of all securities and other evidences of indebtedness of the Gary Heat, Light, and Water company, and directing an inquiry into relations between the concern and two holding companies, the Midland United company and the Gary Electric and Gas company.

The commission will look into issuance of $8,000,000 in first lien collateral 5 per cent gold bonds, series A, of the Gary Electric and Gas company, approved by the Indiana state securities commission Aug. 21, 1931. The inquiry resulted from a request of H. G. Fraine, manager of the statistical department of the First Securities Corporation of Minnesota.

Officials of the three companies involved in the order will be required to appear before the commission Sept. 28, bringing all records pertaining to issuance of the $8,000,000 series.

Investigation on behalf of the commission reveals, the order said, that the electric and gas company is a Delaware corporation, controlling the heat, light, and water company, as a subsidiary. The electric and gas company in turn is controlled by the Midland United.

RUSSIA'S FOOD INDUSTRY FAILS; SEE HARD WINTER

Shortage of Sugar and Meat Felt.

MOSCOW, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Instead of the general improvement heralded for 1932, a decrease in soviet Russia's food production for eight months of this year as compared with the same period in 1931 was revealed in government statistics today.

There has been a serious shortage in sugar, meat and salt for some months and these conditions, combined with disappointing progress of the harvest, may presage a hard winter.

Acknowledging the failure of the food industry so far to meet expectations, the newspaper Food Industry has published figures revealing production has not only fallen far short under the five year plan, but fell so low in July and August as to lower the general average production for eight months to 6 per cent below a like period in 1931. This offset a small gain recorded in the first six months of this year.

Find Situation Acute.

In spite of opening of many new packing, canning and refining plants, eight months' production came to only 78.2 per cent of the government's program for that period and only 39.5 per cent of the quota under the five year plan for the whole year.

The statistics were confined to percentages, but indicated the acute state of the country's food supply. The effect is being shown in widespread shifting of workers searching for better living conditions.

The greatest decline in production was shown in sugar, meat, salt and fish. The output of granulated sugar for eight months dropped 56.9 per cent below production for the same period last year, reaching only 45.8 per cent under the government plan.

Meat Production Drops.

Meat production fell off 41.7 per cent in comparison with the previous year and accomplished only 62.9 per cent production under the plan. Salt was off 23.7 and came to only 53.1 per cent under the plan. Fish was off 9.3 per cent and reached only 64.7 per cent of the plan quota.

Canning declined 2.5 per cent and reached only 53.6 per cent under the plan. Butter was two per cent under the 1931 total and was reported to have made 98 per cent of its quota. Flour, vegetables and margarine showed increases over 1931, but still were short of fulfilling the plan.

COURT BATTLE LOOMS OVER ESTATE LEFT BY BERN TO JEAN HARLOW

Sacramento, Cal., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—A legal battle over the estate left by Paul Bern, movie director husband of Jean Harlow, who ended his own life Sept. 4, loomed today when a petition for letters of administration in the estate of Dorothy Millette was filed here by attorneys for Public Administrator Herman Koch.

Miss Millette, who committed suicide by leaping into the Sacramento river, is presumed by the administrator to have been the legal wife of Bern, whom she survived and therefore the owner of one-half of their community property. If she were Bern's legal wife, as presumed, Bern's marriage to Jean Harlow was bigamous.

Bern's will in Los Angeles left his entire estate to Miss Harlow.

Coroner James Garlick has set the Millette inquest for next Wednesday.

RAYMOND ROBINS REPORTED SEEN ON STREET AGAIN

Raymond Robins, prohibition leader and reformer, who has been missing since Sept. 4, when he left New York to keep an appointment with President Hoover, was reported seen in Chicago again yesterday. Richard Smith, 5043 Dorchester avenue, member of the City club, reported seeing a man he believed to be Col. Robins near the club, at 315 Plymouth court.

Mr. Smith said he saw the man as he was leaving the club and spoke to him. Not sure of his identification, Mr. Smith went into the club to get Joseph Desmond, assistant manager, who has known Mr. Robins for 20 years. The man had disappeared when they reached the street. Mr. Smith called the detective bureau and a squad searched the neighborhood.

"The man wore dark clothes and a slouch hat," Mr. Smith said. "I saw Mr. Robins in the club two years ago. I am sure it was him, and he must have run after I noticed and spoke to him. A man could not walk to the corner in the short time I was in the club."

Several persons reported seeing Mr. Robins in Chicago the Thursday after his disappearance. Friends believe he is a victim of amnesia or that he has been kidnaped by bootleggers.

URGE HOOVER TO TAKE STUMP TO SPEED CAMPAIGN

Advisers Insist He Strike at Roosevelt, Garner.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Joseph R. Nutt, national treasurer of the Republican party, today brought the cheering news to President Hoover that funds would be forthcoming to finance a whirlwind final six weeks' campaign to toss back the challenge of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

JOSEPH R. NUTT.

During a thirty minute conference late today the white haired, ruddy cheeked Cleveland banker told Mr. Hoover that funds were coming into the party chest at a rate which would make it possible for the Republicans to spend at least $1,500,000 on the national campaign. While declining to divulge any definite figures, Mr. Nutt said money in substantial amounts had been flowing into the party treasury at an accelerated rate since the Maine election.

Treasurer Nutt said that collections had been so good during the last few days that he had decided to boost the ante from $1,250,000, which originally had been set as the goal for Republican spendings during the 1932 campaign, to $1,500,000. He said that it was possible a larger sum would be collected. If the money comes in, he said, it will be spent.

Many Calls to White House.

Mr. Nutt's financial report reached the White House at the close of another day during which Republican leaders, through personal calls and via the long distance telephone and the telegraph, continued to urge President Hoover to throw his original program for a "stay at home campaign" overboard and take the stump in a final supreme effort. The President's advisers have been virtually unanimous in urging him to inaugurate an aggressive campaign against the Democratic presidential ticket and carry the fight to the whole country.

All that has been decided thus far is that President Hoover will make three speeches outside of Washington. At least one and possibly two will be in the west. Many of the President's advisers have urged Mr. Hoover to deliver his western speech at West Branch, Ia. Others have urged the President to speak at Chicago, Minneapolis or Topeka, where Gov. Roosevelt spoke.

The topics of the President's eastern addresses have not been announced.

Urged to Attack Rival.

Some of the President's advisers have urged him to make a vigorous attack on the financial views of both Gov. Roosevelt and Speaker Garner, his running mate. In this connection the President has been urged to stress the legislative record of Speaker Garner.

In discussing the Republican financial situation following his talk with the President, Mr. Nutt said that he was in a position to do his part in the reelection of President Hoover by getting the funds.

"Some of the fellows did not like the Maine election," said Mr. Nutt when the newspaper men gathered around him. "Well, I liked it; it made my job easier. Before the defeat of the Maine Republicans, money was coming in slowly. Since that time it has been coming in from all sides. You can put on an effective campaign for a million and a half dollars and we will have at least that much."

"To what do you attribute the increased flow of funds?"

"I think it is because the manufacturers and business men of the country want to maintain President Hoover in the White House," Mr. Nutt replied. "Many who contributed large amounts in 1928 are not contributing now. Lots of them do not have the money. But many others who were not on the contributors' list in 1928 are coming through now."

States to Do Own Financing.

In 1928 the national committee expended in excess of 4½ million dollars. That year, however, $885,000 was turned over to the states. This year the states are expected to finance their own campaigns.

Other White House visitors today were Joseph Scott, the California attorney who nominated the President at the Chicago convention, and Representative Robert L. Bacon [Rep., N. Y.]. Mr. Scott said that California would support President Hoover. Representative Bacon said New York would go to the President in November.

Senator Daniel O. Hastings [Rep., Del.], chairman of the Republican senatorial committee was another visitor at the White House. He expressed the opinion that the Republicans would win the national election after a hard fight.

Howell to Speak for G. O. P.

At least one of the senate radical Republicans will be found in the hustings working for President Hoover this fall. Senator Robert B. Howell of Nebraska said today that he would go to Nebraska shortly to campaign for the Republican ticket and for President Hoover. He expressed the opinion that the presidential situation in Nebraska and other states of the west was "in the lap of the gods."

"My impression is that Hoover sentiment is growing and that things are looking better for the Republicans," said Senator Howell.

YOUNG WHITNEY OPENS CAMPAIGN AT SABINS' HOME

Al Smith Is Speaker at Rally.

Southampton, Long Island, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The active south shore campaign by Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney for congress was launched this afternoon at the divided house of the Charles H. Sabins.

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith was there to urge both the Democratic candidate and the party to greater things. Mr. Sabin, who is both the chairman of the Guaranty Trust company and a Democrat, made a brief speech, and Mrs. Sabin—who announced earlier that she would support Congressman Robert L. Bacon, a Republican, was in something of a dilemma.

Sabins on Opposite Sides.

Just as the Sabins are on opposite sides of the congressional race for the First district, so is all of Long Island society. Country clubs are divided against themselves, and vast estates are barely speaking to the estates across the way. The Manhasset group are for Whitney, and the Sagamore Hill aggregation of Roosevelts—only distantly connected with the Albany Roosevelts—are for Bacon.

Whitney is clearly leading in polo and among the members of the racing set, and Bacon is a former Harvard crew man in an area of many former Harvard crew men. Both were born to the blue bloods and have been close friends socially speaking.

Sabin Introduces Smith.

It was Gov. Smith who made the big talk of the afternoon while the neophyte stood by. There was a heavy rain all around Bayberry farm, the Sabin estate, and cars coming to the rally were bogged down on all sorts of nearby roads. Mr. Sabin, introducing Mr. Smith, placidly announced that the weather had not been ordered by the Democratic party anyway.

"I hold that this is an appropriate day for our candidate," Mr. Smith said, "for the weather corresponds to one of the important planks for our campaign."

Candidate Whitney made a brief reply. Judge Morgan J. O'Brien and Surrogate James A. Foley gave brief talks, and then a voice from the back of the room called for Mrs. Sabin. She remarked that it was "unfair," and then eased herself away with the comment that "I hope all good Democrats and some Republicans will give Mr. Whitney their support."

Candidacy Causes Confusion.

The entry of the Democratic Mr. Whitney into the deepest dyed of Republican blue stocking areas has turned the social countryside into confusion. It is said that Mrs. Whitney at a country club luncheon a day or so ago started campaigning only to find she had gotten in with a bunch of Bacon workers.

Mr. Whitney has the name of Vanderbilt—even though he has dropped it—along with the "Sonny" of a happy-go-lucky day. His grandfather was a secretary of the navy under Cleveland, and Mr. Bacon's father was a secretary of state under Roosevelt. They belong to some of the same clubs.

ALLEGRETTI AND FARDY NAMED TO RUN FOR BENCH

The Democratic county central committee yesterday named Municipal Judges James F. Fardy and Francis B. Allegretti as the party's candidates in the November election for the Superior court vacancies caused by the death of Judges Albert C. Barnes and Martin J. Isaacs. At a later meeting the city central committee postponed until Oct. 4 the nomination of a successor to Judge Fardy on the Municipal court ticket, where he was a candidate for reelection.

Mayor Cermak, introduced by Chairman Clayton F. Smith, sharply criticized some members of the party organization for fault finding.

"There has been criticism of some of the candidates," he declared. "They should cut this out. All of the candidates should talk for the whole ticket, and not just for themselves. I have also heard some complaints that city pay days are slow. That can't be helped. It's due to the city's financial condition. The pay cuts were necessary in order to keep employes at work. Some men, who in the past have been contributors to party funds and have asked nothing in return, are now asking for relief payments."

SEEK RUNAWAY GIRL, 18.

RANCHERS HEAR PROMISE OF AID BY ROOSEVELT

Special Train Crosses Wyoming.

BULLETIN.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic presidential nominee, arrived in Salt Lake City shortly before midnight tonight for a two day stay, during which he will outline his views of the railroad problem in a speech tomorrow night.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

En Route with Roosevelt, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The cattle ranges today heard a promise of better days from Franklin D. Roosevelt.

All day long the Democratic presidential candidate's special train pushed through the ranch lands of Wyoming, a state which has suffered the harassment of drought on top of economic depression.

Gov. Roosevelt didn't promise rain to the crowds he addressed when the train was halted for short stops at Cheyenne, Laramie, Green River, and Evanston, but he did promise the Wyoming folk a definite program of legislation and national planning, to be launched, he said, as soon as he enters the presidency. He expressed the hope that his program will bring a restoration of industry and agriculture.

All Must Benefit.

"Both go hand in hand," he declared at Cheyenne. "We cannot lift industry without at the same time lifting agriculture. Agriculture, which includes cattle and sheep, is an essential part of the economic structure, and the farm dollar must be made bigger so that you people out here can resume buying the manufactured articles in the east."

Gov. Roosevelt said that the economic recovery will not come easily, but he declared his determination that when it does come, it will be spread over all parts of the country and all walks of life.

Rides in Republican's Auto.

At Cheyenne Gov. Roosevelt saw the sights of the city riding in an automobile owned by a Republican presidential elector. The chairman of the committee arranging for the governor's entertainment was stumped when he tried to get an open car, and finally he had to call on George Hewlett, whose name will be on the ballot as a Hoover elector, to loan his handsome touring car.

Members of the governor's party tonight will enjoy their first night in real beds since the Roosevelt special train left Albany last Monday. The party was due in Salt Lake City shortly before midnight.

Tomorrow evening Gov. Roosevelt will address the citizens of Utah from the platform of the Mormon tabernacle.

Bomb Blast Causes $500 Damage to Filling Station

A black powder bomb was exploded early today at the filling station of the Chicago Merchandise and Equipment company, 4302 South Halsted street, causing damage estimated at $500. Lieut. Michael Cleary of the Stockyards police attributed the bombing to labor trouble, as the station employed nonunion help, he said. Otto J. Gehrer, 9850 South Damen avenue, secretary of the company, said he had been asked to employ union help several times, but no request had been made for six months.

Browder, Chicago; congressman at large, Leslie Raymond Hurt and Anthony Paszczolkowski, Chicago; governor, Leonidas MacDonald, Chicago; lieutenant governor, Arthur Hershy, Springfield; secretary of state, Frederick H. HOOVER FORCES FIND MINNESOTA LIKELY TO BOLT farming sections was divulged at the recent state fair. Even the Republican press took note of it. Country editors reported their communities bitterly hostile to the President. The western part of the state is almost solidly anti-Hoover—"enemy territory" it's called at Republican headquarters.

Farm Unrest May Lose State for G. O. P.

"I don't say Hoover can't carry Minnesota," said one Republican manager, "but unless the prices of wheat and hogs and dairy products go up and the farmers get into a better mood by election day Minnesota will go Democratic so far as the national ticket is concerned."

State Ticket Stronger.

He said that Earle Brown, millionaire farmer candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, is far stronger than Mr. Hoover and might pull the President through.

So much of a Jonah is the President in the farming sections that the disposition of the Republican state committee has been to throw him overboard in order to save Brown. An agency called the younger Republicans, sponsored by the state committee, has been organizing Brown clubs, but nobody was organizing Hoover clubs. Walter Newton, the President's political secretary, has been here several days trying to ginger up the organization in behalf of Mr. Hoover.

The Democrats are far from united and, but for the farmers' grouch on the party in power, wouldn't have a chance. Although the Smith Democrats were thrown out of the Roosevelt controlled Chicago convention they won the primary and nominated their entire state ticket, headed by John E. Regan, candidate for governor.

The Democratic national chairman, James Farley, however, refused to recognize the new state committee, dominated by the Smith "rumpers," as the agency for conducting the Roosevelt canvass. He placed the Roosevelt campaign in the hands of National Committeeman Joseph Wolf and effected a close working arrangement with the Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota, which had repudiated the nomination of "Gen." Jacob Coxey by the national Farmer-Labor convention.

Olson Indorses Roosevelt.

The Farmer-Labor governor of Minnesota, Floyd B. Olson, has indorsed Roosevelt and has praised the Topeka speech as the most hopeful plan of farm relief ever presented. The Roosevelt campaign headquarters consists of two employes dispensing literature in Joe Wolf's hotel bedroom. The Farmer-Labor headquarters circulates most of the Roosevelt literature. So patent is the hookup between the Roosevelt managers and the Farmer-Labor party that all sorts of stories of deals are afloat. One is that if Roosevelt is elected he will appoint Senator Henrik Shipstead [Farmer-Labor, Minn.] to a diplomatic post and the Gov. Olson will run for senator two years hence. Senator Shipstead has not indorsed Roosevelt up to date.

The Smith Democrats are working for their state ticket, but giving Roosevelt no aid and comfort. In fact Smith Democrats are circulating petitions to place a set of Smith electors on the ballot, thereby making Smith an independent candidate for President in this state.

As a result of the invalidation of the congressional redistricting all 9 Minnesota congressmen will be elected at large. The Republicans, Farmer-Labor party and Democrats all have full slates of candidates. The Democratic candidates are all repealists. Most of the Farmer-Labor candidates are wet in one degree or another. Of the Republican candidates 2 are dry, four are former drys now standing on the Chicago plank and three are repealists. A Minnesota delegation overwhelmingly against retention of the eighteenth amendment seems assured.

CLAIM HERRIOT SENT LETTER ON DEBTS TO BORAH

PARIS, Sept. 16.—(AP)—It was reliably reported in the chamber of deputies lobbies today that Premier Herriot had sent a letter to United States Senator Borah some time last week on the subject of war debts and disarmament.

Officials at the foreign office said they had no knowledge of the report, but comment was refused at the premier's office.

The report was that the premier wrote the letter at the suggestion of members of the chamber of deputies who said they had reason to believe that Mr. Borah had changed his attitude toward war debts and the French position on security.

HOOVER DELAYED ACTION IN SLUMP, GARNER CHARGES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The Democratic candidate for Vice President, Speaker "Jack" Garner, breezed into Washington from Texas, Topeka and other points west today in a mood both confident and indignant.

Mr. Garner was confident—though he warned Democratic workers not to be over-confident—about his chances of moving over to the senate end of the capitol next March. He was indignant because, he said, President Hoover was now claiming credit for all the relief measures that he had opposed when congress wanted to pass them.

"One of the major factors in retarding improvement of conditions is the inconsistency and vacillation of the Hoover administration," Mr. Garner explained. "This is exemplified in the sudden change of front with respect to public works."

The speaker recalled how Mr. Hoover's acceptance speech had deplored the addition of 300 million dollars to the tax burden for public works as the Democratic leadership's price for passing "vital reconstruction legislation."

Then less than a month later, on Sept. 9, said Mr. Garner, the country heard Mr. Hoover announcing the use of a portion of this 300 million "in order to aid unemployment."

HORNER PLEDGES PROTECTION FOR SMALL INVESTOR

Promises to Strengthen Security Laws.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Moline, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Speaking to audiences near the Iowa border today, Judge Henry Horner of Chicago, Democratic candidate for governor, pledged himself, if elected, to obtain passage of laws to prevent the recurrence of such "financial holocausts" as the crash of the Insull utility enterprises. He likewise promised protection to the investing public.

"Our experience with the Insull collapse has taught us the necessity of state legislation designed to prevent a repetition.

"The savings of thousands of small investors in Illinois were wiped out. The duty of the state is plain and shall be emphatically exercised," Judge Horner told a large crowd gathered in the Genesco park this afternoon and again at Moline tonight.

Promises Severer Laws.

For the investing public the candidate offered this assurance:

"While the state cannot entirely guard against loss in the value of securities, it should have laws and the proper enforcement thereof aimed to protect the investor against false representations and which will compel such disclosures of facts in connection with the value and character of the securities sold as will enable the buyer to know at the time of making the investment just what he is really buying."

John C. Martin of Salem, the Democratic candidate for state treasurer, who is traveling with Judge Horner, along with Martin A. Brennan of Bloomington, who seeks election as congressman at large, added to this financial discussion by promising to follow the lead set by the current treasurer, Edward J. Barrett, in turning back to the state every dollar collected as interest on state funds.

Mr. Martin has been an "Egyptian" banker for 25 years. He was glad to tell the crowd, he said, that his bank is still open and its deposits have increased materially during the last six months.

Gets Enthusiastic Welcome.

Geneseo's welcome to Judge Horner was equally as warm as those extended by other towns on the tour itinerary and a capacity crowd heard him at Moline tonight.

The Geneseo band and a motor caravan of Horner followers met the judge at the city limits and escorted him through the business section to the park where hundreds of men and women were waiting on pine benches in the warm afternoon sunshine.

Other Democratic candidates, including State Senator Leroy Adair of Quincy, who is running for congress in the 12th district, were also present and the meeting was turned into a sizable Democratic rally as the crowd grew.

The judge was cheered repeatedly during the course of his address, which he delivered in the easy, informal style which has won him high regard in a section of the state long noted for stanch allegiance to the Republican party. Not the least approval was given when he denounced the quo warranto law, passed during the régime of his opponent, Len Small, by which state officers are immune from investigation.

"Nothing so dastardly has ever been placed in our statutes," he declared. "My opponent had the unmitigated gall to push this law through the legislature. One of my first acts as governor will be to secure its repeal."

CATCH 7 MEN TRYING TO STEAL 16 ROOM HOUSE

Police Say They Confess Taking Another.

Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The theft of a seven room dwelling while it temporarily was unoccupied led to the arrest today of seven men, said by police to have admitted razing the structure.

Six of them were hammering away at a 16 room brick residence when the police approached. A small truck was busily engaged in carting away the salvage.

"What's going on here?" officers asked.

"We are taking this house apart as fast as we can," the workmen replied.

The wrecking ceased at official command and the mysterious movers, Harry Smith, 42; Ralph Smith, 38; Joseph Stewart, 51; Harold Stewart, 22; Leroy Stewart, 23, and Isaiah Granger, 17, were carted away, too.

They named August Korn as their employer. Korn, upon being arrested, admitted razing the seven room structure which disappeared last week and said he was in charge of demolishing the brick building, police declared.

Korn said he was a subcontractor, wrecking buildings condemned by the city for a man named Roberts, who lived somewhere in the vicinity of the Lake of the Ozarks, in central Missouri. Agents for both buildings denied they had been condemned.

The theft of the first house was discovered last night when an agent, H. B. Cohn, went to inspect the property and found an excavation marking the spot where the dwelling once stood.

The wrecking business, even without police interference, is not so good, Mr. Korn declared at police headquarters. The salvage sales from the frame structure amounted to $115, of which $104 went for labor, $10 to Roberts, and $1 net to Mr. Korn.

POLICE REPORT FEWER CAR THEFTS; '0 YEAH?' SAYS LAWYER SCHATZ

Police Lieutenant George Teeling of the automobile detail yesterday complimented Assistant State's Attorneys Joseph Orrico, John Murphy, and Samuel Rosenthal for their work in prosecuting youthful automobile thieves.

Appearing before Judge J. William Brooks, sitting in the Boys' court in the police building at 11th and State streets, Teeling said that since Sept. 6 79 boys have been held to the grand jury, 21 have been sentenced, and only 16 granted probation for automobile thefts. Further, he said, the work of the prosecutors has resulted in a 60 per cent reduction in thefts since the same period last year.

An interested spectator was Attorney George M. Schatz, who had appeared as the representative of an automobile owner to assist in the prosecution of a youth who had stolen the car. Shortly afterward he walked to the curb, a hundred feet from police headquarters, where he had parked his automobile. He looked about and then returned, seeking Lieut. Teeling, in high dudgeon.

"Statistics or no statistics," he complained, "somebody just stole my car."

QUEBEC PROVINCE TO GAG 3 TYPES OF JOURNALISM

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Sept. 16.—Legislative action curtailing along certain lines the freedom of the press in this province was forecast today by Premier Taschereau.

"The time has come," he said, "for the legislature to do its utmost to put an end to three types of journalism. The first is that which caters to the elements which cause racial and other forms of disorder; the second, that which thrives upon blackmail, and the third that which borders on the immoral."

Premier Taschereau's announcement came on the heels of a judicial statement this week from the Civil court bench at Montreal by Justice Desaulniers, who had been asked to issue an injunction against three Montreal French language weekly newspapers restraining them from their anti-semitic campaigns.

FIND UNCLE SAM INVADES ANOTHER BUSINESS FIELD

Army Shops Compete with Private Tailors.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—It is the job of the war department to make soldiers, not shirts, according to the firm conviction of Representative Joseph B. Shannon [Dem., Mo.], head of the congressional committee investigating this business of the government competing with private business.

MAJ. GEN. JOHN L. DE WITT. [Acme Photo.]

That is why he was somewhat irked today when Maj. Gen. John L. De Witt, head of the quartermasters' depot at Philadelphia, told the committee that his army tailoring shop fashioned riding breeches for colonels, made overcoats for lieutenants and sewed up blue denim work overalls for privates.

"Tour'e competing against the local tailor," urged Chairman Shannon.

"Not at All," General's Reply.

"Not at all," flared up Gen. DeWitt. "We don't make all the uniforms. We have to make some, to set a standard, you know, for the tailors when we let contracts."

"O, I see," Mr. Shannon mused reflectively.

Gen. DeWitt was of the opinion that it would not be wise to adopt his policy in every field of manufacture, but he maintained that it was a justifiable practice at the quartermaster depot.

From the cost sheet which Gen. DeWitt had presented in evidence, Representative Shannon then pointed out that in 1931 it had cost the government $2.54 to make a woolen coat and 84 cents for a woolen breeches, or $3.38 for the uniform, exclusive of material. But that same uniform, made from materials furnished by the depot, had been purchased the same year on contract from private manufacturers at a cost of $2.14 [$1.48 for the coat, and 66 cents for the breeches].

Loses on Every Uniform.

"That's $1.24 that the United States government loses on every uniform it manufactures in its own tailor shop," Representative Shannon declared.

Then the discussion turned to the overcoats for the officers. A smartly tailored overcoat bought at the private tailor's costs $101; the same garment ordered from the Philadelphia depot costs $54.

The committee charged that officers from all parts of the country sent their measurements to Philadelphia and got their coats by mail. But oftentimes this correspondence product did not fit. The captain or colonel would then take his overcoat into the local tailor shop near his post and ask to have it refitted.

Deny Army Boycotts.

"And I suppose," Representative Shannon's eyes twinkled, "the local tailor, displeased because he had not been given the original order, often does make the price for remodeling rather stiff. If he does the officers boycott him, I am informed."

"Not at all, not at all," chorused the general and two aides, a colonel and a captain. "The army never boycotts."

"We have proof," chorused Chairman Shannon and two congressional associates. "We have a batch of letters from tailors all over the country, stating that they are afraid to testify for fear of a boycott."

And shortly after that impasse the hearing adjourned for the day.

Killed by Train

MARGARET RYAN.

Miss Margaret A. Ryan, 19 years old, 932 South Grove avenue, Oak Park, was killed yesterday afternoon when she leaped or fell in front of a Chicago, Aurora and Elgin passenger train at the Tripp avenue station of the elevated lines.

According to John P. Ryan, foster father of the girl, she had been in good spirits recently. He attributed her death to accident. She had left home to visit a dentist, Dr. George Schock, 524 South Cicero avenue. Dr. Schock said he had talked to her about an appointment on Thursday and that she seemed cheerful at that time.

Miss Ryan was graduated at the Providence High school, a Catholic institution, in 1930. Identification of the body was first made through a class ring she wore. The girl, an orphan, had been adopted by Ryan and his wife when she was 7 years old.

COURT PONDERS SIMPSON-CHURCH VOTE CONTEST

Circuit Judge Thomas J. Lynch yesterday took under advisement the contest between Ralph E. Church and James Simpson Jr. for nomination as Republican candidate for congress from the Tenth congressional district. Attorneys for both sides finished their arguments late last evening and Judge Lynch announced that his decision probably would be given during the next week.

The contest was begun by Simpson, who was defeated for the nomination by only 73 votes out of more than 30,000, on the face of the returns of the election commissioners. According to the unofficial recount standing last evening, Simpson was ahead by 25 votes. Judge Lynch carried into his chambers for consideration a bundle of several hundred ballots, the validity of which has not yet been determined.

The contest has been carried daily for more than two months. Almost every ballot cast has been taken into court and subjected to the scrutiny of Judge Lynch and Attorneys John F. Tyrrell and Urban F. Lavery, counsel for Church and for Simpson, respectively. Both the contestants were in court yesterday. Attorney Tyrrell argued for four hours. Attorney Lavery ended his case with one hour of argument.

4 MORE JUDGES REFUSE TO TAKE CUTS IN SALARIES

19 Agree to Reductions; 12 Maintain Silence.

Four Municipal court judges last night declared they would not take the forty-eight days' salary cut which other city employés were forced to take this year. Two judges joined the seventeen jurists who have accepted the slash.

Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby on Thursday revealed that seventeen judges had accepted the cut; that one judge refused, and that eighteen others had not replied to letters sent them Aug. 10 inquiring about their stand on the salary reduction imposed by the city council. Six additional judges were reached on the telephone last night, making the score stand as follows:

Accepting pay cut—19.
Refusing to accept cut—5.
Noncommittal—12.

Judges Explain Refusals.

Judge Edgar A. Jonas was the only jurist to refuse to accept the pay slash in writing. The four judges who joined him in this refusal and their comments when reached last night were as follows:

Judge Francis Borrelli: I was elected in 1923 when the salary of Municipal court judges was $9,000 a year. The judges elected in 1924 got $10,000. Until 1926 I got only $9,000 a year while they were getting $1,000 more. My taxes are 50 per cent higher this year. I'll take the cut only if all the others do.

Judge Howard Hayes: I took one cut of 15 days' pay early this year. I don't care to be drubbed into taking a further reduction in salary.

Judge Justin F. McCarthy: Having taken one cut of 15 days' pay, I think any further reductions should be volunteered by me. The city owes me salary now.

Judge Mathew D. Hartigan: I worked for $9,000 a year from 1922 to 1926, while other judges, elected in 1924, had salaries of $10,000 a year. Give me that $4,000 I lost and I'll gladly take a cut. I'll take anticipation warrants or an I. O. U. for the forty-eight days' pay, but not a flat cut.

Judge Edward S. Scheffer said he had had no time to answer Judge Sonsteby's letter. He declared he had been one of the first to vote for the forty-eight day pay cut and would take the full reduction.

Casey Accepts Pay Cut.

Judge Edward B. Casey explained that he had been unavoidably delayed in answering the chief justice's letter and revealed that he yesterday mailed an authorization to Chief Justice Sonsteby to deduct forty-eight days' pay from his 1932 salary.

"I have always supported the principle of reducing government costs," said Judge Casey. "I was one of the first to advocate the reduction in pay recommended by the city council."

The twelve judges who are on the "missing" list as regards a stand on the pay cut question are Judges J. William Brooks, Alfar M. Eberhardt, Leon Edelman, William R. Fetzer, Joseph A. Graber, Thomas A. Green, John F. Haas, William E. Helander, John J. Lupe, John H. Lyle, John Sbarbara, and Frederick W. Elliott. The latter has been reported ill for several weeks.

HOTEL HELD UP FOR THIRD TIME.

Two well dressed bandits made their third visit in six months yesterday to the Jackson Arms hotel, 3441 West Jackson boulevard, and took $147 from Mrs. Marie Wheeler, the manager.

N. Y. CITY MAYOR MOVES TO SAVE $30,000,000 YEAR

Stops Extravagances; Hopes for Pay Cuts.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Forging ahead with his economy drive, Mayor Joseph V. McKee swung the ax today on two sources of extravagance, and from a third quarter received an offer of voluntary salary reduction which he said would amount to $30,000,000 a year if all city employés would adopt the same course.

The day's developments included:

Closing of the Bronx terminal market to the public after Jan. 1 to save $144,828 a year on its operating cost.

Preparation of drastic orders to take all pleasure cars owned by the city out of service, leaving in use only those needed for actual inspection work.

Receipt of an offer from fire department officers reducing their salaries $250 a year, which would amount to $1,500,000 a year carried through the department and $30,000,000 a year if the same offer were made by all city employés.

Estimates of the cost to the city of the fleet of limousines it has maintained have run as high as $1,000,000 a year, a figure which includes the salaries of the day and night chauffeurs whom some city officials have had at their command.

Mayor McKee, who dismissed Markets Commissioner Thomas F. Dwyer for failure to provide a plan that would put the Bronx market on a paying basis, decided today that its employés should be reduced immediately, and that after the first of the year only a skeleton force should be kept at work. He said the employés would be absorbed in other departments that had room for them.

Mayor McKee's first proposal reduced the market's annual pay roll from $148,585 to $88,934 immediately. The plan retains twenty engine room employés whose services cost $34,575; an office force costing $10,060, and a force in the market building costing $19,299. This force will continue to operate the market until the first of the year to provide service for four tenants who pay the city $24,777 in rent.

PRINTERS TO HAVE REFERENDUM VOTE ON FIVE DAY WEEK

Long Beach, Cal., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—A referendum vote on the question of a five day week was ordered today by the International Typographical union. It would affect printers on newspapers of six or seven day schedule.

The motion favoring the short week was carried, 76 to 74. The referendum clause was adopted, 111 to 39, after being urged by President Charles P. Howard.

The "New York plan" was the basis of the move. It affects 22,000 printers. It does not affect existing union contracts with employers, but provides that when a printer has worked five days in any one week he must engage a substitute for one day.

INQUEST IN BANDIT MURDER.

A coroner's jury yesterday found David Arkules, grocer at 313 East 45th street, who was killed by two Negroes during a robbery, was a victim of "murder by persons unknown."

PUPILS TO STUDY ANIMALS' LIVES IN MUSEUM ZOO

The lives of gophers, deer mice, and turtles will be studied by pupils in the public schools this year at the Trailside museum in Thatcher woods, at Chicago and Thatcher avenues, according to a descriptive circular sent out yesterday with the bulletin to principals by William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools.

The circular was written by Charles G. Sauers, general superintendent of the forest preserve district of Cook county.

"More can be taught in a short time in this way than any other about the habits of animals—what they eat, how they make love, how care for their young, their temperament and individuality," said the circular.

"There are gophers digging happily in a glass roofed bungalow, chipmunks, flying squirrels, rabbits, deer mice, a skunk, sparrow hawks and screech owls, toads, frogs, salamanders, turtles, snakes, fish, snails, crawfish, and insects."

WAUKEGAN UNION AGENT ARRESTED ON BOMB CHARGE

O. J. Burandt, 24 South Butrick street, Waukegan, business agent of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs Independent union of Lake county, yesterday was charged with a bombing and with participation in the slugging of three men.

State's Attorney A. V. Smith, who obtained warrants for the arrest of Burandt from Justice of the Peace Harold J. Tallett of North Chicago, charged that Burandt's union originally was under the domination of the late George [Red] Barker, slain Chicago gangster.

Burandt, it is charged, went to a road building job west of Highland Park early yesterday in company with James Farmer and Bennie Bollman, Chicagoans, and beat three teamsters, Charles Carter, Charles Trier, and Onnie Hookneu in an effort to force them to join the union. The men were already members of another union.

The bombing with which Burandt is charged damaged the plant of the Home Ice and Coal company.

2 ROBBERS HOLD UP STORE; 1 SHOT, BOTH CAPTURED

Edward Kastel, 17 years old, 4416 West Jackson boulevard, was shot and wounded while fleeing after a holdup last night. He was captured with his companion, Louis Snitz, 17 years old, 1215 South St. Louis avenue.

The boys entered the army goods store of James Portman at 4121 West North avenue and took $30 from him. As he was being held up Portman stepped on the button of a home made burglar alarm which set off a buzzer in the flat above his store, occupied by Irving Bernstein, owner of a confectionery at 4119 West North avenue.

Bernstein rushed to the street with a revolver. He called upon the bandits to halt. When they continued to flee he fired and wounded Kastel in the right leg. Both bandits stopped and surrendered.

Employment and Pay Rolls Show Increase in Illinois

Industrial employment throughout the state increased 2.3 per cent during August, according to the monthly report of the Illinois department of labor made public yesterday. During the same period pay rolls increased 6.3 per cent in the 1,002 reporting institutions. Chicago was among the leaders in the increase with employment increasing 3.9 per cent and pay rolls 9.1 per cent in the 508 reporting institutions.

EXCHANGE ASKS FOR REPORTS ON POLITICAL NOTES

Maine Election Day and 3 Following in Period.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The New York Stock exchange began an investigation today of recent political information or comment transmitted by its members. Its committee on business conduct ordered members here to send to it by noon all "telegraphic communications dealing in any way with topics of a political nature sent or received by them between Sept. 12 and 15, 1932, inclusive." Out of town members have until Monday to send in similar information.

Sept. 12 was the day of the Maine election, in which the Democrats were surprisingly victorious, and the four days specified saw a sharp break in stock prices.

Rule of 1920 Cited.

The letter ordering the information was signed by Ashbel Green, secretary of the exchange, and addressed to all members. It said:

"Referring to the circular issued by the secretary of the exchange under date of Dec. 1, 1920, reading as follows:

"'I am instructed by the committee on business conduct to notify you to keep on file for at least two weeks all communications sent and received over private wires, as the committee may wish to inspect them.'

"The committee on business conduct now requests all New York City members to send in by noon tomorrow, Sept. 16, 1932, all telegraphic communications dealing in any way with topics of a political nature sent or received by them between Sept. 12 and 15, 1932, inclusive. Out of town members are to submit the same information by Monday, Sept. 19, 1932. A reply is desired from every recipient of this communication.

"Members having out of town correspondents are requested to transmit the contents of this circular to their correspondents promptly by wire."

Purpose Not Divulged.

The purpose of the call for material was not divulged.

The exchange has, however, been a political target recently, particularly for shots from the Democratic side. Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in one speech accused the administration of having failed to regulate stock transactions rigidly enough. To begin treading lightly now in political comment might save the exchange some trouble after March 4, next, particularly if there should be a change in ruling parties, some observers believe. The effect of today's action by the exchange will probably be the minimizing, in brokers' letters, of political developments on market conditions, it was said.

Brokers said today that there had not been an unusual volume of political comment on their wires, although they have spoken of campaign and election possibilities for the market.

Samples of Comment.

Here are some samples of the comment which the exchange is calling in:

E. F. Hutton & Co., Sept. 14—"The Democratic victory in the Maine elections brought an avalanche of selling into the security markets this morning, causing substantially lower openings and then a further sharp dip. From the psychological standpoint, the Democrats will probably capitalize on the implications of the Maine vote."

Clark, Childs & Keech, Sept. 14—"The uncertainties caused by the results in Maine were sufficient to accelerate the recent downward movement into a very serious reaction."

Charles D. Barney & Co., Sept. 14—"The apparent abandonment of the Republican standard by Maine resulted in the first complete selling climax since the abandonment of the gold standard by Great Britain."

Hornblower & Weeks, Sept. 14.: "The reactionary tendencies which we saw developing last week were, of course, accelerated yesterday by the results of the Maine election."

Model of Clay

The clay model of the head of Leif Ericson for the monument in Grant park was completed yesterday by Oscar J. W. Hansen, sculptor, in his studio at 10 West Elm street. The head, which will be cast in bronze, measures 6 feet from the neck to tip of the crown. The statue and base will stand 32 feet in height alongside two 100 foot pylons. The project will cost $250,000 and is being financed by Scandinavians in this country.

$2,000,000 PERSIAN NAVY, BUILT BY DUCE, COMPLETE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Sept. 16.—Persia will take its place among the world's naval powers for the first time tomorrow, when its new $2,000,000 navy, consisting of six units, leaves Naples for Mohammerah. The vessels were built in Mussolini's shipyards.

The Riza Khan Pahlevi, shah of Persia, wants to add to his prestige in western Asia. His new fleet will be the first effective marine defense Persia has ever had. It will be stationed in the Persian gulf for coast guard work. The gulf's hinterland has rich oil fields and its lines of communication need to be guarded.

The fleet consists of two big gunboats, armed with two 4 inch, two 3 inch, and two anti-aircraft guns, and four smaller gunboats, armed with two 3 inch guns and machine guns.

Italy also has a contract to train Persian officers and sailors. The crews of the six ships leaving tomorrow were trained in the Leghorn Naval academy.

ITALIAN FLYERS CONTINUE SEARCH FOR LOST PLANE

ROME, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Italian aviators continued a search today over the coast and Mediterranean for the airplane American Nurse, now nearly two days' overdue on an attempted flight from New York to Rome.

The search was carried on despite the certainty expressed by officials that the plane and its three occupants failed even to reach the European coast and were lost in the Atlantic.

In the plane, which left New York Tuesday morning, were Edna Newcomer, undergraduate nurse of Williamsport, Pa.; Dr. Leon M. Pisculli of Yonkers, N. Y.; William Ulbrich of Mineola, N. Y., the pilot, and a woodchuck, brought along as a mascot.

SANITARY BOARD FILES REQUEST FOR R. F. C. LOAN

Asks $36,450,000 for Sewage Plants.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The Chicago sanitary district today made formal application at the Federal Reconstruction Finance corporation for a loan of $36,450,000, with which to prosecute the sewage treatment program ordered by the United States Supreme court in the lake diversion case.

The 36 million dollar advance, if granted, would be used for the construction of the north side, west side, and Calumet sewage disposal stations, and will carry work on the district's entire program forward for about 15 months.

Would Give Work to 1,500.

William Rothmann, attorney for the sanitary district, filed the formal application in person with the engineering advisory board of the corporation. With the application he submitted a large trunkful of plans, specifications and other technical data intended to support the district's belief that the sewage stations are "self-liquidating projects" under the provisions of the emergency relief act.

Mr. Rothmann said he advised officials of the corporation briefly as to the general aspects of the sanitary district's request, pointing out that the district estimates its annual revenue during the next 10 years at about $3,500,000.

He also pointed out, he said, that work on the disposal stations is ready to begin at once—possibly on 24 hours' notice, and that at least 1,500 to 2,000 men would be given direct employment within a week. The sanitary district, according to Mr. Rothmann, has contracts totaling $9,000,000 already outstanding with the contractors ready to begin work as soon as money is made available. In addition, he said, plans and specifications are ready for additional work involving $2,500,000, while other work totaling from 4 to 6 millions would be advertised for bids within 60 days after the loan was granted.

Montana, Arkansas Get Loans.

The district's application will be taken under consideration by the engineering advisory board of the corporation and the corporation's legal experts.

The loan, according to Mr. Rothmann, will be made through the Reconstruction Finance corporation's purchase of sanitary district bonds.

Emergency relief loans totaling more than $300,000 were granted by the corporation to Montana and Arkansas today, bringing the total thus far disbursed from the corporation's 300 million dollar relief fund to $21,168,099. The Montana loan totaled $300,000 and the Arkansas advance was $502,500.

'POLITICAL PLOT' RELEASES SNAKE FROM SPIDER WEB

Mayor Implicates All of St. Charles' Aldermen.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

Political pull did it! Out of the spider web and into politics is the story of the garter snake of St. Charles.

Townsfolk were surprised early yesterday as they sallied forth to the day's routine to discover the eight inch reptile, which has been featured in front page headlines all over the country the last few days, basking comfortably and well fed in a bottle in the East Main street window of Ald. E. W. Sandholm's meat market.

Mayor Admits Charge.

Citizens of St. Charles who had bet on the spider to win the bout with the snake which it had held enmeshed in its web for 26 days promptly shouted charges of political influence. Dr. I. G. Langum, mayor of St. Charles, suavely admitted the charge and implicated the entire city council, admitting that all the aldermen were present when the garter snake was set free from the spider's web at 1 o'clock yesterday morning.

A city council meeting had been called for Thursday night, Mayor Langum stated, to discuss various municipal matters. But the general debate clung tenaciously to the topic of the spider and the snake and what should be done in view of the protests from the humane organizations in the Chicago area who wanted the snake set free, and the demand of the citizens that the spider be left to deal with the snake which was enmeshed while seeking the spider's life.

The Web Is Cut.

Shortly after midnight the city council meeting terminated the discussion by adjourning to the pumphouse under the great standpipe with a number of spectators. Joseph Pecaro, a busboy from a St. Charles inn, was delegated by Mayor Langum to use his pocket knife on the strand of web that imprisoned the snake. As Pecaro advanced, so did the spider. But when the knifeblade cut through the web the spider retreated precipitately before superior forces, disappearing behind a sheet of tin.

The spectators watched the snake break its fast of nearly a month on some flies after it was put in the milk bottle, and the St. Charles drama was over.

Snake Killed By Spider.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A two day battle between a spider and a six inch garter snake, held fast in a web spun by the spider, ended today in death for the reptile. The struggle occurred in the basement of the home of W. F. Miller at Monroville, who said the spider skips up and down a silken cord biting again and again at the snake, unaware of his victory.

No Struggle Here.

Burlingame, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Not all snakes and spiders get along as badly as those at St. Charles, Ill. Burlingame police today pointed to a black spider and a grass snake in a bottle on a desk at headquarters. They have lived together for three days and it is still "no contest."

WANT CERMAK TO CALL SCHOOL PAY CONFERENCE

The Chicago High School Teachers' association has voted to request Mayor Cermak to call a conference of bankers and teachers' representatives to work on plans for the payment of back salaries to school teachers, it was announced last night by George E. Mahin, executive secretary of the organization.

Mayor Cermak and City Controller Szymczak refused yesterday to confirm published reports that New York bankers were "ready and willing" to lend the city 40 million with which to pay the past due salaries of city employes and teachers. The mayor will meet Chicago bankers early next week.

"I was given no promises of a purchase of our tax warrants or refunding bonds by the New York bankers," said the mayor, "so I know nothing of those reports."

"While the attitude of the New York bankers was friendly, they didn't tell us that they would buy any of our securities," commented Controller Szymczak. "In fact, no definite amounts were mentioned. We were given to understand that the New York bankers would act only in cooperation with the Chicago bankers; that any purchase movement must start here."

NEED FUNDS TO GIVE LUNCHES TO NEEDY PUPILS

Unless money is raised for free lunches many needy public school children will go hungry this year, Miss Frances L. Swain, director of household arts in the schools, announced yesterday. Last year 10,000 free lunches were provided for the children by funds raised by public subscription. The funds have been exhausted. Seventeen penny lunchrooms will be opened in the schools on Monday. A child can get a meal for 5 or 6 cents. Many children have no money and go hungry. Sixty school cafeterias were opened in junior and senior high schools last Monday. In these a meal can be obtained for about 18 cents. In the cafeterias the pupils pay for operating costs as well as for food, while in the penny lunchrooms the pupils pay for the food alone.

Wine Fatal to Two Found to Be Anti-Freeze Mixture

The supposed wine which caused the deaths of John Fornolski, 43 years old, 1308 East 93d street, and Charles A. Zasaitis, 20 years old, 9313 Woodlawn avenue, after they salvaged it from a city dump and drank it on Aug. 16, was really an anti-freeze compound for automobile radiators, Deputy Coroner Louis J. Nadhenry, a graduate pharmacist, testified yesterday at a coroner's inquest into the two deaths.

Orders New Warship Laid Down.

ject to the same rules and principles in respect to disarmament, and that no discriminatory system should exist in the case of any one of them," the foreign minister wrote.

"Germany cannot be expected to take part in negotiations with regard to measures of disarmament to be laid down in convention until it is established that the solution which may be found is also to apply to Germany."

Baron von Neurath said Germany's efforts to obtain an agreement on the equality issue had thus far failed to achieve a satisfactory result, and therefore the reich would cease sending representatives to the Geneva parley.

"The German government," he continued, "is now as ever convinced that thoroughgoing general disarmament is urgently necessary for the purpose of insuring peace."

British Are Evasive.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16—The halls and corridors of the British foreign office were stacked today with packing cases labelled "United Kingdom Delegation." They are bound for Geneva, where the disarmament conference is to be renewed and the league of nations council is to meet next week.

Not for months have official spokesmen been so evasive on what the British attitude will be toward the questions to be discussed at Geneva. These questions include Germany's demand for equality in armaments, President Hoover's proposal for a one-third reduction in world armaments, Italy's obvious unrest over the British hesitancy in taking sides, and Japan's dissatisfaction and reported threat to quit the league over Manchuria.

Despite the official secrecy, some indication of what the British attitude is shaping towards is obvious in informed quarters. It is admitted that the former allies must reduce their armaments in accordance with the Versailles treaty or else Germany must be admitted to equality at the present level.

GERMAN INDUSTRY PROTESTS VON PAPEN'S POLICY ON FARM AID

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—The fight between German industrialists and farmers for the government's favor entered a new phase today when the National Association of German Industry, through its managing chairman, Dr. Ludwig Kastl, warned Chancellor Franz von Papen that his agricultural policy is causing "grave anxiety." The industrialists, who have been assisted by the recently imposed supertariffs, are protesting against the proposed quotas on agricultural imports to aid the farmers.

In a letter to Von Papen, Dr. Kastl declared that such import quotas will not help the farmers in the long run because the foreign countries affected are certain to introduce retaliatory measures on German industrial exports. Thus the purchasing power of the public will be further diminished, causing the farmers to lose more than they can hope to gain through import quotas, the letter said.

The National Farmers' association countered with an appeal to the government "not to allow the farming interests to be degraded by a small group of export interests into an object of dickering." The body further demands relief on interest payment burdens.

WAUKEGAN CHILD, 3, IS BURNED TO DEATH IN HER BED

Phyllis Slovnik, 3 years old, was burned to death shortly after 3 o'clock this morning as she slept in a room in which she lived with her mother, Mrs. Sylvia Slovnik, at 214 North County street, Waukegan, when the room caught fire, supposedly from a lighted cigaret. Mrs. Slovnik, employed at a North Chicago restaurant, was away at work at the time and had left the child alone.

Capt. Thomas Booth of the Waukegan police arrested for questioning Emerald Jones, a sailor at the Great Lakes Naval Training station, who also rooms at the place. He was found severely burned in another part of the house. According to Capt. Booth, Jones has been attentive to Mrs. Slovnik, who is estranged from her husband, John. The police theory is that Jones had been smoking in a chair near the child's bed and dropped a cigaret.

CITY CLOSES ITS EVIDENCE IN GAS RATE HEARING

Expert Attacks Prices and Sales Policy.

With nearly 600,000 words of testimony in the record, the city of Chicago closed its case yesterday in the gas rate hearing which has been in progress before the Illinois Commerce commission for the last seven months.

Cross examination of one witness, delivery of oral arguments and submission of written briefs are the only steps remaining before the commerce commission gives a decision. It was indicated that the decision might be handed down within the next sixty days.

To close his case, Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph F. Grossman called as his last witness F. P. Fisher, a consulting engineer with 33 years' experience in the gas industry. Mr. Fisher was formerly manager of thirty gas companies for the Cities Service company and is now technical adviser to the utilities commission of the province of Alberta.

Attacks Present Rates.

In a 100 page report, illustrated by numerous graphs, charts and algebraic calculations, Mr. Fisher offered evidence that both the sales policy and the rate structure of the Peoples Gas company now prevailing are unfair to the domestic consumer and, at the same time, unprofitable to Peoples Gas.

"The rate on cooking gas should be reduced from 18.8 cents a therm to 16 cents," he said. "The rate on water heating gas should be cut from 16.4 cents to 10.5 cents. But the rate on house heating gas might well be increased from 8 cents to 10 cents."

Instead of expending sales promotion on house heating gas, as is done at present, the company should concentrate on selling water heating gas, Mr. Fisher maintained. This change of policy, he declared, would benefit both the company and the small consumer.

Advocates Change in Policy.

"Under the present setup," he pointed out, "the company estimates having an annual excess supply of 116,000,000 therms as a result of slack summer sales. They propose to sell this 'dump' gas to industrial consumers at 1.75 cents a therm. I do not challenge the price, but I do maintain that by making the suggested change in rates and sales policy the supply of "dump" gas could be cut to 10,000,000 therms."

With reference to the projected enormous supply of "dump" gas, Mr. Grossman declared it significant that, under the Peoples Gas setup, the principal customers and beneficiaries of the "dump" gas prices would be two affiliated companies, Commonwealth Edison and the State Line Generating company, producers of electric power.

Engineers for Peoples Gas listened attentively as Mr. Fisher explained how, by gathering data on all gas sales factors in thirty cities he had arrived at a formula which, he said, enabled him to calculate within 5 per cent of accuracy a fair price on all classifications of gas sales in any given community.

Engineers Are Skeptical.

Mr. Grossman said the Fisher formula was one which would eventually "revolutionize" methods of determining utility rates in this country. The engineers for the gas company were somewhat skeptical.

"The report is interesting and instructive," said Frank Griffith, assistant secretary-treasurer of Peoples Gas. "From a purely academic standpoint, Mr. Fisher's theories may be correct. However, we do not believe his conclusions based on data from such cities as Des Moines and Calgary have much bearing on gas rates in Chicago."

MILLER DENIED RELEASE UNTIL FINE IS PAID

W. H. H. Miller, who was the head of the department of education and registration during the regime of Len Small, will stay in the county jail until he has paid a fine of $2,000. His petition for release as a pauper was denied yesterday by Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court.

Miller has served a seven months' sentence for operating a fraudulent diploma mill as a state official, but so far has failed to pay the fine imposed upon him on a conspiracy charge. Pleading that he is penniless, Miller testified he had transferred all his property to his wife in Champaign.

Judge Prystalski indicated at a previous hearing that he considered the property transfer fraudulent. Attorney Charles H. Dougherty, for Miller, made a motion to vacate the transfer, which was continued for one week.

P. O. MESSENGERS LAID OFF TO AID IDLE CARRIERS

The Chicago postoffice is giving indefinite furloughs to special delivery messengers and substituting unemployed civil service rating carriers and clerks, it was learned yesterday. Of the entire staff of 350 messengers, 128 have now been furloughed and 100 more are expected to be laid off this week. Postal officials said the messengers would be reemployed as soon as conditions warrant the move.

C. P. Scheel, assistant postmaster, said the charges of the messengers' organization that they were the victims of discrimination are unfounded. The clerks had asserted that the postoffice discharged them as a political move.

"With the postoffice hit by the depression there is not enough work to go around," said Assistant Postmaster Scheel. "Generally speaking, the messengers are younger and do not have the responsibilities of the older men. At the same time they are not technically employes of the postoffice, having only a contract to handle special delivery letters. It is simply a case of doing the least harm possible to the smallest number of men."

BOOKS

Skill of New Wharton Book Thrills Critic

Novel Is Also Tense Tale in Own Right.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"The Gods Arrive," by Edith Wharton. [Appleton.] Published yesterday.

TO a person whose business it is to read books with both hands, as it were, with the right hand of critical judgment and the left hand of the reaction of the man in the street and the woman in the home, there is an intense, almost physical sense of satisfaction and well-being when—all too rarely—a book appears which is at the same time a fine, clean, surpassingly skillful piece of craftsmanship and a tense tale in its own right.

EDITH WHARTON.

It is not a natural corollary of power or what the public will find powerful that the carpentering of a noval be perfect or that the workmanship in that business of joining beam and beam be one of infinitely delicate mortising. There are many readers—critics as well as mere pleasure seekers—who find a too careful carpentering uninteresting, who prefer roughly sawed planks in the framework of their literary edifices. Of those readers I do not happen to be one. To me there is infinite joy in a good piece of literary technique. I feel about it the way a musician feels about a Bach fugue.

Edith Wharton is a superb technician. Whatever she writes, the carpentering of her literary edifice is as nearly perfect as craftsmanship can achieve. Almost any one of her novels could be taken as examples by the tyro, even those which are not, by their subject matter, of the first importance. And those which combine subject matter of first import with her genius at technique are as good as have ever been written in America—"Ethan Frome" for instance and "The House of Mirth" and that short quarter of "Old New York," "The Old Maid." Of such are the histories of literature written.

Edith Wharton is the chronicler supreme of the old social régime of New York. No writer has ever surpassed her in setting down the story of the socially elect of her native land. "The Gods Arrive" is the story of a woman born, reared, deeply rooted in the traditions of the inner circle who, in a sudden realization that love is life and life without love is not worth the living, leaves her husband to go to Europe with a young author.

To her, trained to definite standards, awareness of human contacts, the sacrifice of her position or her good name is a real sacrifice, but joyously made for the joy of love and its fulfillment in her lover's need of her and his creative expression. She loves the man, and she loves equally the author, and she gives herself wholly to both. To him, trained differently and temperamentally without a social sense, their love is enough to justify itself and he is driven to a realization of her position only because another woman of her own class refuses to receive her.

The heroine's husband had long before her flight asked her to divorce him that he might marry another woman, but when the other woman refused to marry him he, in revenge of his fate, refused his wife her freedom. "The Gods Arrive" is the panorama of the life of a woman firmly rooted in the traditions of a Puritanic race with a man naturally free from those traditions and freed further from all tradition by his nature, the nature of a creative artist.

If only for the record of the temperament of a writer "The Gods Arrive" would be an alluring book. There are phrases in it which are not to be forgotten.

"In the full tide of invention he felt himself possessed by a brooding spirit of understanding, some mystic reassurance which sea and sky and the life of men transmitted from sources deeper than reason. He had never been able to formulate it, but he had caught, in the pages of all the great creative writers, hints of that mysterious subjection and communion, impossible to define but clear to the initiated as the sign exchanged between members of some secret brotherhood. Ah, they were the happy people—the only happy people, perhaps—those through whom the human turmoil swept not to ravage but to fertilize." That is a profoundly beautiful paragraph, elucidating the creative urge and gratification.

And one need only to have known a creative artist—not even to be one oneself—to know the truth of this: "When Vance's brain was in full activity his hours of idleness acquired a new quality. It was as though he looked at everything through the powerful lens of his creative energy, so that the least detail of the landscape, the faintest fugitive play of cloud and sun, sufficed to enrich his dream."

No after literary criticism has ever been written of some modern writers than: "What business had a man of Weston's quality to be doing novels like ladies' fancy work or an expensive perfume." But such criticism is not for "The Gods Arrive." It is not the fancy work which occupies the idleness of life nor the perfume, however expensive, which adorns it, but life itself.

Presents Book as Compass to Tangled World

Cole, the English Author, Pens Long Work.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—One of the most important new books, to be published very shortly, is G. D. H. Cole's "Intelligent Man's Guide Through World Chaos." This is a long work—it runs to a quarter of a million words—and is to be issued at a very low price, by the enterprise of its publisher, Mr. Gollancz, who realizes how important it is that a book of popular interest should be available to all. And it will be widely read.

G. D. H. COLE.

Mr. Cole is a good and clear writer. He knows his facts. And he is human, as readers of the excellent detective stories in the writing of which he collaborates with his wife, can testify. Those detective stories are always ingenious; they have pleasant characters who are recognizably human beings, and they reveal humor in the authors.

Humor, knowledge, and unaffected style—what valuable qualities in a writer who would explain the world's disastrous position to the millions who are bewildered by the contradictions of the experts and the grimaces of the pseudo philosophers who pretend to advise us as to the cure of present ills!

The letters of D. H. Lawrence are not, after all, to be "chosen" by the English Book society. The publishers, I am told, after carefully considering the question, have decided that it will be better to bring the letters out in the ordinary way, and at a remunerative price. This seems to me to be a wise decision, in view of the fact that Lawrence is not an author whose correspondence is likely to appeal to all and sundry. Many of the letters, moreover, were addressed to agents and publishers; and while the book will certainly be of great importance, and great interest to Lawrentians, it was perhaps hardly suited to the appetite of those who buy books for general entertainment.

A long and ambitious novel of Glasgow life, called "Mungo," is in danger of being overlooked by those to whom the "saga" is growing an old fashioned form of literary art. The book deals with the lives of three generations of a Scottish family, and it is the eleventh novel of "George Woden," a sound and intelligent craftsman long respected in this country for good work.

Mr. "Woden" writes of a life which he knows from actual experience, and his book is authentic and vigorous. In private life the author is George Slaney, but all his novels and plays [for he is dramatist as well as novelist] have appeared under the pseudonym.

Several of Arnold Bennett's friends have, since his death, written brief personal memoirs of their old colleague. None of these has as yet been published, but a publisher might well collect them into a single volume as a testimony to a great and kindly personality. Miss Pauline Smith, the author of "The Beadle" and "The Little Karoo," is one of these friends.

Two Good Books for Children

BY AGATHA L. SHEA.
[Director of Children's Work for Branches of the Chicago Public Library.]

"The Road to Carolina," by Marjorie Hill Allee. [Houghton-Mifflin.]
"Nikita," by Frances B. Phelps. [Harcourt-Brace.]

SOME years ago Marjorie Hill Allee made a contribution of more than usual interest in her fine story of the underground railroad called "Susannah and Tristram."

This year she has given us the sequel to that story in "The Road to Carolina," and young readers who enjoyed the earlier book, and I cannot imagine any who read it not doing so, will be glad to follow the fortunes of the brave young Quaker girl and her little brother. The new story centers about the adventures of the lad, Tristram, now a boy of 17, on a return trip to his old home in the days just preceding the civil war.

Riding with Uncle Tommy Pearson, the staunch old Quaker abolitionist who spent his time preaching against slavery on its own ground, Tristram finds himself one day back in Carolina at the home of a distant cousin, and at the beginning of a series of adventures which were to lead him finally back to a home in the southland.

The period is that preceding and immediately following the election of Lincoln, and Mrs. Allee has pictured for us very realistically the distress and uncertainty which in those early days of secession permeated the border states, and the unfortunate situation of the southern Quakers, who, abhorring slavery as a great moral wrong, could not conscientiously join the fight against it. Although the characterization, with the exception of that of Jesse Coffin, leaves much to be desired, and although Tristram's adventures cannot be called thrilling, the story, nevertheless, is an exceptionally good one, and the junior high school reader will close the book feeling that he has been taken behind the scenes, as it were, and has seen this period of our history from a new angle.

Another book of interest to this age is Frances B. Phelps' "Nikita," a story of Russia under the old régime. Nikita, young son of a Cossack, living with his grandmother in a little hut in the Caucasus, is awakened one night by her sobs, and learns that, in a very vivid dream, she has seen his father dying in Siberia. Superstitious, the old woman considers the dream a call from her son, and regardless of the boy's protest, they start.

The description of that long, cold ride across the bleak frozen northland in the poorly equipped third class train, in itself, makes the book worth reading. The hardships and exposure prove too much for the aged woman, and one morning the little lad awakens to find the shelf upon which his grandmother had lain, empty.

After bidding farewell to a lonely grave in that desolate land, he takes up his journey alone, only to find the dream was true and his father dead.

The story of the boy's trip back from Siberia, the difficulties he met, and the good fortune which he finally won, is a fascinating one, realistically and dramatically told.

The author has given us here a good story, having all the elements which appeal to young readers, but she has given us more than that in this unforgettable picture of a Russia which is gone.

'They Winter Abroad' Is Satirical Work on Lives of Tourists

"They Winter Abroad" [Viking] is an addition to that rapidly growing gallery of satirical books on tourists abroad. The setting is in the Hotel Santo Biagio, near Sorrento, that most seductive of Italian coast resorts.

There is a professor who orates to all who will listen on the grand and elaborate theories of love, and a Miss Prune whose vows of chastity she finds increasingly embarrassing, Dr. Arnold-Browne who cannot seem to remember at the critical moment what he did and what he didn't promise in the marriage rite; Mr. Pupillary, who finds his eyes straying toward the beautiful natives of the place, and Miss Albino, an avowed spinster, who feels strangely dramatic, like the heroine in a book, when she by some stroke of luck becomes the romantic rescuer of a tortured mule.

"They Winter Abroad" is a wicked and witty parody akin to "Crome Yellow" and "South Wind" in its manner. The book bristles with snappy dialogue and barbed epigrams but it is not without its pity and gentle irony and a certain sort of provoking thoughtfulness. The name of the author, James Aston, is a pseudonym. Among the surmises as to the identity of the author have appeared the names of Norman Douglas, Aldous Huxley, Eric Linklater, Richard Hughes, John Collier, Harold Acton, David Garnett, Edward Charles and Evelyn Waugh.

Attention - Mr. V. E. Donahue
Gentlemen:
Seeing is believing - this picture, taken at noon Monday, will visualize for you the results from our 3 column by 170 line advertisement run only in last Sunday's Tribune. This event received no other publicity.
The picture does not tell the complete story because it does not show the hundreds of women who were waiting for the doors to open at nine o'clock. By nine-thirty we were forced to line the customers up on our Main Floor in a que that extended clear to the street. From then on we could allow a customer to go up to our Second Floor only as one came down.
We were swamped. We had anticipated a crowd, but three times our present floor space would not have been too much room for this Sale. Our sales staff was on the go from morning until night without a stop for food. The good nature of the patrons was a splendid thing to behold.
For twelve years we have been a consistent advertiser in Chicago, but never before have we witnessed such a tremendous response from any newspaper.
By four o'clock Monday we had sold in excess of 700 dresses. It was by far the biggest day in our history. In the palmiest days of 1929 we never had anything to compare with it.
Our hats are off to the Tribune.
Yours very truly,
LANE BRYANT

This is the 3-column by 170 line advertisement which Lane Bryant ran exclusively in last Sunday's Tribune.

Lane Bryant ran the accompanying three column by 170 line advertisement, featuring 1,600 women's dresses at $6.00, exclusively in last Sunday's Tribune. The event received no other publicity.

"This picture," wrote Emanuel Winkelman, manager of Lane Bryant, "taken at noon Monday, will visualize for you the results.

Here is additional evidence of how the women of Chicago respond to offers placed before them in their favorite newspaper—the Chicago Tribune.

It is up-to-the-minute evidence. It emphasizes what can be done right now in this market with advertising in the medium which has the circulation, the reader-interest, and reader-confidence necessary to do a big job at low cost in this market.

Daily and Sunday, if you want to reach the largest number of responsive buyers in Chicago and suburbs, place your advertisement in the newspaper that has the dominant coverage—the Tribune!

CERMAK TO TELL PLANS FOR DRIVE AGAINST CRIME

Mayor to Speak Today at Bar Luncheon.

Mayor Cermak was planning yesterday to give public expression to his ideas for a major offensive against Chicago crime and especially the habitual criminal and the gunman. He will speak on this subject today at the Constitution day luncheon of the Chicago Bar association. His subject will be "As Europe Sees Chicago."

For some time the mayor has been considering legislation that would give the police broader powers in their activities against armed criminals. He has been bitter in his condemnation of laws under which the courts have freed well known criminals who, when arrested by the police, were found to be carrying guns.

Would Amend Gun Law.

One remedy for this situation, according to the mayor, is to amend the gun toting law so that the police can obtain convictions of armed hoodlums even though they search the gunmen without having search warrants. He said he would ask the bar association to draft the necessary amendments for submission at the next session of the general assembly.

"I am also going to ask the bar association," the mayor said, "to appoint a committee which would join with all the law enforcing agencies and such civic bodies as the Chicago Association of Commerce and the crime commission in a major offensive against all crime. There may be much that can be accomplished without the aid of new or amendatory legislation.

On Reporting Car Thefts.

"One method of combating the commission of crimes with the aid of stolen automobiles would be to make the reporting of stolen cars instantaneous. The profits in stealing automobiles for their accessories could be checked by putting the second hand automobile business under the same supervision that is given to pawnshops."

In his speech the mayor will relate the exaggerations of criminal conditions in Chicago that he found in his tour of Europe and his efforts to reduce them to their proper proportions.

John Hill, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; James Williams, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary by Judge John J. Sullivan.

A charge of extortion against Mrs. Bertha Diez, 27 years old, arrested in connection with the sending of threatening letters to the fathers of society brides, was nol prossed yesterday by Police Magistrate Harry H. Porter of Evanston. A similar charge against her husband, Rudolph, was continued until Sept. 30 to await outcome of a hearing in the federal court, where he is charged with sending extortion notes through the mail.

Attorney Edwin M. Ashcraft Jr. of Evanston is the complainant against Diez in both state and federal courts. He received a letter which demanded that he pay $3,000 or his daughter, Ann, would be injured. Diez was trapped when he appeared to claim a decoy package left, as directed in the extortion note, in the service doorway of an apartment at 4427 North Ashland avenue.

VIOLENT QUAKE WRECKS TOWN IN NEW ZEALAND

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, Sept. 16.—Wairoa, an east coast town on North island, was nearly destroyed by an earthquake which caused indescribable havoc this morning.

The streets of Wairoa are in confusion, the bridge to the town across the Wairoa river, which empties into Hawkes bay, was destroyed, the walls of buildings collapsed and roads cracked. A noise like artillery fire accompanied the temblor, which began at 1:30 a. m. The electric power and water supply were destroyed.

Gisborne, on Poverty bay, was also damaged. The postoffice building was cracked and the tower had to be removed. A wall of the Anglican cathedral fell out.

These communities had just finished rebuilding after the temblor of a year ago.

8 Barber Shop Owners' Groups Are Consolidated

Seven district associations of barber shop owners in Chicago have voted to consolidate with the Loop Master Barbers' association under the new title of the Master Barbers' Association of Chicago, it was announced yesterday by William Marks, field executive of the new group. The new organization includes 2,800 of the approximately 4,200 barber shops in the city, Marks said. The association contemplates an advertising campaign to promote personal appearance, improvement of sanitary conditions in shops, maintenance of price levels, and extension of membership, he asserted.

Loses Court Battle

[Acme Photo.]

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Edith Ransome, stage star who won fame in "White Cargo" as Tondeleyo, lost her six year court battle against the Actors' Equity association here today when Superior Judge Daniel Deasy dismissed the $150,000 suit filed by the actress.

The action, naming the association, Attorney Theodore Hale and Richard Tucker, well known actor, as defendants, was dismissed when Miss Ransome failed to appear for trial. Her attorney pleaded his client was "stranded" in Seattle and unable to pay the expenses of a trip to San Francisco.

Miss Ransome alleged the Actors' Equity association had conspired to keep her from the stage. In 1925 she was ordered out of the Wilkes theater here after a row with Tucker. Subsequently she won a judgment against him.

'TOUGH' CAPEZIO IS FREED OF BANK ROBBERY CHARGE

Cashier Not Positive in Identification.

Anthony [Tough Tony] Capezio, Chicago gangster, was freed yesterday in Elgin of the charge that he led the gang which took $9,160 in a holdup of the State Bank of St. Charles on June 9.

Capezio, a one time suspect in the St. Valentine's day massacre, was arrested Sept. 1 in Chicago. Vernon V. Olson, cashier of the bank, and Frank Burr, assistant cashier, who had previously pointed out Capezio's rogue's gallery picture as that of the bandit leader, came to Chicago and identified him. They said at the time, however, that they were not absolutely sure of their identification, and the Kane county grand jury postponed action on the case after hearing their testimony.

Appears Before Magistrate.

Capezio, who has been at liberty on a $25,000 bond, appeared yesterday before Justice of the Peace A. J. Strickman in Elgin. Olson, who appeared to be very nervous, was placed on the witness stand. Asked to point out any one in the room who resembled the bandit leader, he pointed out Capezio.

"Are you positive that that is the man?" asked State's Attorney George D. Carbary.

Capezio looked up quickly at Olson.

"No, no," said Olson.

At the time of the robbery the bandit leader placed a shotgun against the back of Olson's head and threatened him with death when the cashier was slow in remembering the combination of the bank vault.

Compare Fingerprints.

Burr did not appear against Capezio yesterday. It was said that his identification was even less certain than Olson's. Police Chief Harold Covalsky of St. Charles testified that while there was a "remarkable resemblance between Capezio's fingerprints and a partial thumbprint left by one of the bandits on a cash drawer in the bank experts could not say positively that the prints were the same.

State's Attorney Carbary accordingly agreed to a dismissal of the charge of robbery with a gun against the gangster and to the cancellation of his bond.

Chicago Tunnel Company Pays $710,000 to City

Sherman Tracy, president of the Chicago Tunnel company, yesterday paid to City Treasurer Kearns $710,000 in back compensation for the use of city streets by the underground merchandise transportation system in the downtown district. The amount of compensation, a compromise on the city's original claim of approximately $1,400,000, was fixed in the new tunnel franchise approved several months ago by the city council. The money goes into the city corporate fund, making it available for pay rolls.

FIGHT TO BAR COMEDIAN FROM ROADHOUSE ACT

Judge Wonders How Dells Can Pay Big Fee.

Superior Judge Joseph B. David and Ted Healy, bald comedian, played to a full house yesterday when Healy appeared in court to oppose issuance of an injunction preventing him from appearing at The Dells, a roadhouse on Dempster street, four miles west of Evanston.

TED HEALY.

Attorney Samuel A. Ettleson, counsel for Producers' Associates, Inc., of New York City, sought the injunction on the ground that Healy is under contract to the producers to appear in their musical show now playing in Cincinnati. Healy and his lawyer, Benjamin H. Ehrlich, asked that the injunction be denied.

$3,600 for Twelve Evenings.

Judge David said that he would continue the hearing until next week and would protect the rights of both parties until that time. He then called Healy to the witness stand. The comedian, who was clad in a bright checked suit, buff gray shoes, and a peppermint candy stripe necktie, told Judge David that his salary was to be $2,600 for appearing twelve evenings at The Dells.

"Gracious me," ejaculated Judge David, "what kind of a place is this Dells?"

"It's just a dine and dance place. A sort of cabaret," said Attorney Ehrlich.

"Don't they have gambling out there?" Judge David asked.

"O, no. I don't think so. I don't believe it," said Healy with a frown.

"Well, your honor, I'm sure that they don't make money enough to pay Mr. Healy from their dinners or from the dancing," Attorney Ettelson said. "It's not for that alone that hundreds of people go out there."

Ettelson Posts $25,000 Bond.

Judge David looked startled. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

Attorney Ettelson shook his head and Mr. Ehrlich spoke up, saying: "Apparently Mr. Ettelson knows as much as Sheriff Meyering. But all this has nothing to do with Mr. Healy."

"Yes," responded Judge David. "Let's get back to Mr. Healy."

Finally Mr. Ettelson agreed to post a $25,000 bond to reimburse Healy for any loss he might sustain in complying with an earlier injunction which prevented him from appearing on a Radio-Keith-Orpheum circuit vaudeville tour. Hearings were set for Monday morning before Master in Chancery Harry Smitz, and court adjourned.

FLOOR OF BURNING BUILDING FALLS; SIX FIREMEN HURT

Fireman Daniel Moeller, 35 years old, 2111 North Mozart street, received a fracture of the skull and five of his mates were less seriously injured yesterday when a floor fell on them as they were fighting a fire in an abandoned three story building at 2109 South Dearborn street.

The other injured firemen are: James Blair, 739 West 54th place; John Kerwan, 5943 South Bishop street; Emmet Dorsey, 2341 Grenshaw street; Edward Lysaught, 7750 Eberhart avenue, and Alex Grimm, 1520 West 78th street.

Division Marshal Joseph Mackey said that he understood that the building had been condemned and ordered razed. He started an investigation to determine why the order had not been carried out. The fire is believed to have been started by tramps sleeping in the building.

Drop Connors Charges in Waukegan Bank Case

A charge of conspiracy against J. Murray Connors, former vice president of the closed Waukegan State bank, was nol prossed yesterday by Circuit Judge Ralph J. Dady of Waukegan, on the motion of State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county. The move was the second step in a plan, announced yesterday by Smith, to dismiss all criminal prosecution growing out of the bank failure.

Killed by Gas While He Works on Motor of Auto

Edward C. Schmidt, 53 years old, 5241 Kenmore avenue, was asphyxiated yesterday by carbon monoxide gas in the garage at the rear of his home. He apparently had been overcome while working on the automobile engine, police said. Schmidt was Chicago branch manager of the Thomas L. Leedom company, Bristol, Pa., carpet manufacturers, and had offices at 14 East Jackson boulevard.

REFORM SCHOOL AT ST. CHARLES IS BEING REFORMED

Criticisms by Brandon Bring Results.

Criticism of the St. Charles Training school some months ago by Rodney Brandon, state superintendent of public welfare, has resulted in widespread reform in the "reformatory."

Methodical rearrangement of the plan of operation, it was reported yesterday, is rapidly removing from the institution the stigma placed on it by Brandon, as contributing to the delinquency of its inmates rather than training them for better citizenship.

Under the auspices of the Institute for Juvenile Research, surveys of the internal management of the home were instituted beginning in March. Tests revealed that about forty of the wards should have been committed instead to Lincoln or Dixon asylums for the feeble-minded. These boys are being transferred as fast as the official red tape permits.

3 Groups Investigate.

The advisory committee appointed to investigate the institution, of which Judge Olney Allen of Kane county is chairman, was divided into three groups. One took up the problem of commitments, the second occupied itself with residential care, and the third considered the parol system and possible improvements in it.

Inquiries by the commitment division revealed that in many cases boys actually without criminal tendencies, sent to the school for minor offenses, were being compelled to associate with others of much more vicious character, to their own detriment. This point has been brought home to the county judges throughout the state by the committee, who are asked to inquire more fully into the circumstances before committing a boy to St. Charles whose case might be more adequately handled through other channels.

Seek Parole Plan Changes.

These examinations should serve to cut down the number entering the school, it was stated. A still further improvement can be realized, it is thought, by changes in the parole system. Ways and means are being sought to accomplish this.

R. W. Fairchild of Northwestern university, heading a subcommittee on education, reported a study of delinquency by H. A. Lane, a member of the subcommittee, is being used as the basis for various changes in the curriculum. Emphasis is being placed, he explained, on vocational activities such as tailoring, baking, shoemaking and greenhouse work, to interest the boys and control their energy properly.

Team Work Handicapped.

"Then, too, these boys are such individualists that it is next to impossible to get together a basketball or football team," Prof. Fairchild said. "So we are promoting athletic activities especially. We also have introduced music instruction and find there is a good deal of promise for a harmonica band, for instance. There was a band at St. Charles before, and we hope to have one again."

A change in the attitude of the boys already is apparent, Prof. Fairchild believes, although some of the innovations have only been in operation for a month. Robert Havlik, the new superintendent, is cooperating to the fullest extent, he added.

Missing Balloon Floating on Lake Off Racine

The captive balloon which broke from its moorings at the World Fair ground during a storm last Monday was sighted early yesterday in Lake Michigan, 20 miles southeast of Racine, by Captain Lester Brown of the ship Wolverine. Rough seas caused Captain Brown to give up efforts to salvage the balloon, he said. Coast guards at Kenosha and Racine were notified and went in search of the wreckage. The balloon was riding high on the water and seemed in no immediate danger of sinking, Brown said.

REFUSED JEWISH MARRIAGE, WIFE WINS A DIVORCE

Judge Joseph B. David granted a divorce yesterday in the Superior court to Mrs. Cora Joseph Resnick, 1418 South Homan avenue, on the grounds that Simon Resnick committed a fraud upon her by refusing to go through a rabbinical marriage after their civil ceremony on June 20, in the marriage court. On his refusal Mrs. Resnick left him immediately, she said, and has never lived with him. "I have held before that such a performance is fraud and contrary to Mosaic law," said Judge David. "In this case I want the record to show that it was not only contrary to Mosaic law, but that there was also a fraud upon this woman under the statutes."

Smith Pays $10,000 Rum Fine; Recovers Big Yacht

The big yacht Kenkora, seized by the government when smuggled liquors were found on board, was returned yesterday to its owner, Kenneth G. Smith, president of the Pepsodent company. Mr. Smith obtained the vessel by a payment of a $10,000 fine. A certified check for the amount was tendered to Collector of Customs Czarnecki by Mr. Smith's attorney, Weymouth Kirkland.

DRY AGENTS RAID BIG BREWERY ON WEST SIDE

Prohibition agents under Eliot Ness, chief investigator under Administrator M. L. Harney, yesterday raided a three story building at 14th place and Sangamon street, where they found and dismantled a brewery of 6,000 gallons daily capacity.

Thirty-three barrels of beer ready to be delivered were seized. Joseph Codispoti, 1425 Elburn avenue, and Armand Massoni, 7104 North Clark street, who asserted they were merely visitors, were arrested. Pending arraignment on Sept. 23, bonds were fixed at $1,000 each by United States Commissioner Walker.

Other agents raided nineteen saloons and beer flats in Chicago, all in the stockyards district or on the near west side. In each place seizures of liquor and arrests were made. Stills were seized in two barns in Will county, one on the farm of Joseph Thomas at Rose and Raimer roads and the other on a farm on route 22, near Lockport.

Mr. Harney described the activity as "nothing unusual; just the ordinary course of business."

DEATH CALLED SUICIDE.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

GOV. ROOSEVELT AT TOPEKA.

Gov. Roosevelt's speech at Topeka, in which he announced his policies for the relief of agriculture, is extraordinarily difficult to understand. Mr. Roosevelt is fairly clear in his attack on his opponent's administration, and particularly the farm board, but when it comes to stating what he would do if in office the fog is thick.

He would, in the first place, trim the appropriation of the department of agriculture and eliminate the less useful bureaus. This is, of course, desirable, as THE TRIBUNE has often said; but farmers pay almost no federal income taxes, and it is difficult to see how this measure would be of much value in solving the general farm problem.

His second point seems to recommend the abandonment of marginal farm lands, particularly along the Atlantic seaboard, in order to reduce the quantity and therefore increase the price of farm products. The idea is interesting, but Mr. Roosevelt fails to say what is to be done with the men who are farming the lands to be abandoned. Are they to join the unemployed in the cities? Or are they to take up more fertile lands in the west? If the latter, production will not be decreased but increased because the same amount of labor will produce more on good than on poor land.

Mr. Roosevelt's third point was the one on which he received the greatest applause. He advocated the reduction of the tax burden on farmers. Every one will concede the wisdom of this proposal; but Mr. Roosevelt himself pointed out that this is primarily a matter for the local governments. If the farmers of Kansas want relief from high taxes the President of the United States, whoever he may be, cannot help them nearly as much as can their county boards and the members of their legislature.

Those three points were Mr. Roosevelt's long-term recommendations. For immediate relief he favored further advances of federal credit to prevent the foreclosure of farms. In this respect he seems to see eye to eye with President Hoover and both gentlemen slight the plain fact that what is needed is not so much a means of continuing or increasing the farmer's debts as a means of enabling him to pay off what he now owes. The solution, if any, of the farm problem is the discovery of a means of increasing the income of the farmers.

Mr. Roosevelt does not wholly ignore that aspect of the matter, to be sure. He draws up specifications for farm relief legislation. The price of farm products, he says, must be increased in the domestic markets to the degree that the tariff protects American industry, but the increase in farm prices must not stimulate increased production. He does not say how this can be accomplished. Inspired news dispatches say that Mr. Roosevelt may announce a plan later, but meanwhile there is no reason to believe that his specifications are worth much. If the constitution of the United States could be scrapped and the army employed to coerce farmers into limiting their acreage, something might be accomplished, but Mr. Roosevelt rejects that solution, for he says the plan must be voluntary, with every farmer free to join or not to join as he wills, but with the benefits going only to those who join.

Without a more detailed statement of how the conflicting specifications can be compromised in farm legislation, this aspect of Mr. Roosevelt's program can be safely regarded as little more than a pious hope. His one contribution to the solution of the farm problem he put forward rather hesitantly. He believes that the American farmer will be helped if the tariff on manufactures is reduced so that Europeans can sell their manufactured wares in this country and therewith buy our farm products. There is a certain amount of sense in that argument. It would be considerably more convincing if there were some assurance that Europeans were willing to join in the scheme. England would have to repudiate her recent action at Ottawa; France, Italy, and Germany would have to change their policies of import restriction and antagonize their own farmers in so doing. Mr. Roosevelt did not go into that aspect of the matter and he did not specify the manufactures upon which he would lower the duties. Why he did not do so is a point which his opponents may well press.

THE LONG WAY.

The success of Huey Long's candidate for senator and of six candidates for the house of representatives backed by him is not good news. If, as seems plausible, it means the increase or even the maintenance of Long's influence in Louisiana we may without Pharisaism extend our condolences to the people of that commonwealth while realizing that we are not immune from the consequences. Senators and representatives, though chosen locally, have powers national in scope, and thus we arrive at the uncomfortable fact that Huey and his selections vote for us as well as for the people who will send them to Washington. Huey is a colic in Louisiana, but he is also a pain in the neck for the country.

Our consolation is that the Huey Longs in due time dispose of themselves by the natural process of their own folly. They produce results which in time reach the most complaisant following and responsible citizenship has its turn. It is a pity democracy has to pay so heavily for its own instruction and a worse pity that the instruction cannot be carried over to the next generation. If it could be, Illinois would not now be in danger of repeating the self-punishment it inflicted upon itself under Len Small. Experience is a hard teacher, but that would be accepted with more resignation if its instruction were not so soon forgot.

MADE UNANIMOUS.

With the approval of the Austin-Kinzie superhighway project by a majority vote of the West Central association that great public improvement has now the unanimous approval of the organizations chiefly concerned. The West Central association has hitherto been unfavorable because of several considerations which have yielded to further examination. The chief of these had no basis of fact. The central west side will not have to pay for an improvement beneficial only to the loop and the suburbs. Business and property will not be injured by a highway which, as Mr. Taylor of the Chicago plan commission says, adds no additional barrier to the free development of the west side since it parallels the present North Western embankment. The highway instead of injuring the west central district will add to its values by providing a new access to the loop or to the suburban districts.

The opposition of the West Central association was respectively considered, and rightly so, for it is guardian of the interests of the region through which the superhighway must pass. Now that it has reconsidered its position and recognizes that the highway, instead of being a burden and injury to the west side, will be beneficial to it as well as to the whole city, we hope the project will be given the prompt attention it deserves at Springfield. The Austin-Kinzie superhighway is a public improvement which is not only consistent with sound emergency relief but with the sound principles of highway development in Illinois. It has both emergency and permanent importance and should not be postponed further.

THE UNFINISHED BRIDGE.

Owners of hotels on the north side have petitioned the Lincoln park and south park boards to complete the outer drive bridge at the mouth of the river. The fact that funds for the completion of this bridge are not available calls attention to the extraordinary fiscal policies of some of the local governments of Chicago. Bond issues for the bridge were approved by the voters of the park districts. The bonds were issued and sold. The money, instead of being held until needed to pay for the bridge, was used to pay other expenses for which funds were lacking because of the tax crisis. The bridge is not going ahead now because the money to build it was spent for routine requirements which are supposed to be met out of current revenue.

This kind of fund juggling may be legal, but it is thoroughly unsound. The practice cannot be defended on the ground that the park commissioners thought the tax money with which to repay the money borrowed from the bridge funds would be forthcoming. They had ample reason to suspect that taxes were likely to be slow in coming in and that any diversion of the bond funds might delay the completion of the bridge for months, if not for years.

Editorial of the Day

THE DIRECT PRIMARY MENACE.

[Los Angeles Times.]

Writing to a friend in the United States just 75 years ago, Lord Macaulay, whose political partialities cannot dull the brilliance of his intellect and achievements, spoke forebodingly of the governmental tendencies which Jefferson had put in motion. These words, penned in 1857, are in the nature of an inspired warning:

"You are surprised to learn that I have not a high opinion of Mr. Jefferson, and I am surprised at your surprise. I have long been convinced that institutions purely democratic must, sooner or later, destroy liberty or civilization, or both. In Europe, where the population is dense, the effect of such institutions would be almost instantaneous. What happened lately in France is an example. In 1848 a pure democracy was established there. During a short time there was reason to expect a general spoliation, a national bankruptcy, a new partition of the soil, a maximum of prices, a ruinous load of taxation laid on the rich for the purpose of supporting the poor in idleness. Such a system would, in twenty years, have made France as poor and barbarous as the France of the Carlovingians.

"As long as you have a boundless extent of fertile and unoccupied land your laboring population will be far more at ease than the laboring population of the old world, and, while that is the case, the Jefferson politics may continue to exist without causing any fatal calamity. But the time will come when New England will be as thickly ppoulated as old England. Wages will be low, and will fluctuate as much with you as with us. You will have your Manchesters and your Birminghams, and in those Manchesters and Birminghams hundreds of thousands of artisans will assuredly be sometimes out of work. Then your institutions will be fairly brought to the test.

"I heartily wish you a good deliverance. But my reason and my wishes are at war, and I cannot help foreboding the worst. The day will come when in the state of New York a multitude of people, none of whom has had more than half a breakfast, or expects to have more than half a dinner, will choose a legislature. Is it possible to doubt what sort of a legislature will be chosen?

"On one side is a statesman preaching patience, respect for vested rights, strict observance of public faith. On the other is a demagogue ranting about the tyranny of capitalists and usurers, and asking why anybody should be permitted to drink champagne and to ride in a carriage while thousands of honest folks are in want of necessaries. Which of the two candidates is likely to be preferred by a workingman who hears his children cry for more bread?

"I seriously apprehend that you will, in some such season of adversity as I have described, do things which will prevent prosperity from returning; that you will act like people who should in a year of scarcity devour all the seed corn and thus make the next year not of scarcity, but of absolute famine. There will be, I fear, spoliation. The spoliation will increase the distress. The distress will produce fresh spoliation. As I said before, when a society has entered on this downward progress either civilization or liberty must perish. Either some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of government with a strong hand, or your republic will be as fearfully plundered and laid waste by barbarians in the twentieth century as the Roman empire was in the fifth; with this difference, that the Huns and Vandals who ravaged the Roman empire came from without, and that your Huns and Vandals will have been engendered within your own country by your own institutions. Thinking thus, of course, I cannot reckon Jefferson among the benefactors of mankind."

Direct primaries had not been named or defined in Macaulay's day, but the principles and practices they employ were known to him and understood by him.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

FOR A SHORT TIME it looked as though we would have to quit our peerless leader, Norman Thomas. It was announced that Dr. Clarence True Wilson had said he would vote for Mr. Thomas. We simply couldn't see ourselves marching along shoulder to shoulder with Clarence. We prepared to walk right out on Norman. But yesterday Doc Wilson was reported to have discovered that the Socialists through a party referendum had placed a dripping wet plank in the platform on which our peerless leader stands. So all is well; go ahead, Norman, we intelligentsia are right behind you. (That is, we were yesterday, but you never can tell these days.)

INDIFFERENT I.

Oh, most indifferent I,
though loving wind and water,
as well the pageant sky,
oh most indifferent daughter to all she should adore, invite the languid spirit to cherish this, and more,

to worship and revere it:

there will come a morning when these will not uphold, a shrill crescendo warning to turn the spirit cold, to charge it with affection which ever it had lacked,

to send it one direction unerring and exact.

And I shall waken broken and bleeding on the earth, grateful for the token,
grateful for rebirth.

JEANNE DELAMATER.

AND POOR OLD TROTZKY can't even go into Czechoslovakia to take health baths. At first they said he might and then just as Leon was packing up they got cold feet and revoked his passport. What Trotzky ought to do is to disguise himself as a sack of Scotch whisky, start for America, and leave the rest to the rum runners.

THERE'S REALLY ONLY ONE thing in which New York's new mayor, McKee, has it all over our mayor, Tony Cermak. We hate to think that the New York mayor can claim superiority in a single thing, but we must admit the truth, no matter how much its hurts our civic pride, BUT Mayor McKee rides down to his office in the New York City hall every day in the subway.

A HORRIBLE SPECTACLE!

R. H. L.: After a day in Tiajuana, or an afternoon at the races in Agua Caliente, "American" is the Open Sesame that works with the immigration inspector at San Ysidro, but the same password means nothing to the customs inspector two car lengths deeper on American soil. He is as cold as a California night. Hiding a quart of rum or a pint of A. B. C. under the hood of one's automobile is no better than tying it to the radiator cap. A prescribed penalty of confiscation plus a fine of five dollars per bottle, much of which goes to the spotter that tipped it off, insures our government that few potential Tom and Jerries approach the border unheralded. Leaning against the American side of the international wire fence one evening, I watched the returning cars as they cleared the customs. Ah, 'twas a heart breaking experience. I wept scalding tears. A small red coupe from Kansas (of all states) rolled up. The count against its driver was twelve pints of liquid gold. One by one the inspector poured the bottles of contraband into the gutter and set fire to the fluid with a match. I am almost certain that the inspector will roast some day for that deplorable sin, and as for the two dumb dames that stood over the blue flames and toasted marshmallows—I hope their boys go to Harvard. HOMER BREWER.

AND NOW DEPRESSION COLLEGES are being opened where the students pay in apples, eggs, chickens, beef on the hoof, bacon, garden truck, or nothing at all if they've got nothing at all. It's a grand idea, but we shudder at their yell, which will probably make us feel more depressed than ever. It will doubtless be something like this:

Here we come,
We've got no mon.
Varsity! Varsity!
DE-PRES-SION.

WITH THE END of baseball in sight, it looked as though the G. O. P. and the Jefferson lads were going to get a break at last, but right away up pops football. It's a tough world.

The Peak Is Reached.

RHL: Jake Rosenthal says that out west things are getting so tough that the hermits are starting to live together. JAZBO OF OLD DUBUQUE.

REWARD.

Two, they say, shall dream a dream together,
But only one shall trace it to the end . . .
Now you are gone, a gypsy on a highway,
And I am left with lonely fires to tend.

You have forgotten lamplight has warm magic,
And hearths are sweet when dusk blows down the land,
But when the star is safe within your pocket,
Full well I know its prints will bruise your hand.

Then you will come, the long adventure over,
Brave banners down, a suppliant from pain,
And I, who watch through ever-lengthening evenings,
Shall smile to hear dim music in the rain.

HELEN WELSHIMER.

WE PUT a half brick in a sock yesterday and we're practicing throwing it. And the very first bimbo that we hear chirruping it's so and so many days until Christmas gets the works right on the chin. Christmas present! What with?

PROTECTING AGAINST SLEEPING SICKNESS.

LESS than twenty years ago physicians began to recognize a disease which, to them, was new. It is possible that it was as new as it appeared to them to be. At first it was known as sleeping sickness. Since there was a well established African disease having that name, and the new one had a different cause, channels of spreading, and symptoms, it was advisable to find another name for the new disease.

One proposal was to call it European sleeping sickness. Then the name lethargic encephalitis was proposed. Finally the word encephalitis remained as a part of the new name and such adjectives as epidemic, post-vaccinal, and virus were added.

This is a very severe disease. It is fatal to about forty out of each 100 cases who have it and of the sixty who escape with their lives there are many who have some after effect. One peculiarity is that occasionally a person with a normal social personality and some strength of character before the illness will develop in its wake changed personality, lack of character, anti-social personality, or criminal tendencies.

One variety of encephalitis is very apt to follow any one of several diseases. A person has a severe cold and then a succeeding attack of encephalitis. Or the primary disease may be measles or a disease of that group.

Health officials are very unhappy because this form of encephalitis occasionally follows vaccination, being then referred to as post-vaccinal encephalitis. It is regarded as unfortunate to have it follow measles, smallpox, or earache, but it is still more so for it to come in the wake of a produced disorder, such as vaccination. In consequence, an unusual amount of study has been devoted to this type of encephalitis. Experience soon taught that the danger was greatest when an adult had been vaccinated successfully for the first time in his life. On the other hand, children vaccinated when less than two years of age never developed encephalitis in the wake of vaccination. This meant that vaccination in early childhood was safe so far as this danger was concerned, and seemed to make vaccination in adult life safe also.

It is accepted that post-vaccinal encephalitis is not the result of such accidents as pus infection, lockjaw infection, or other similar accidents occurring at the time of vaccination or during the two or three weeks of vaccinia.

Dr. Charles Armstrong of the United States public health service offers a new plan of prevention. It is to immunize the baby against diphtheria by an injection of toxoid at six months of age, and another of the same sort at seven months, and to follow with smallpox vaccination at eight months. If immunization has been neglected in the first year of life he suggests that the plan be followed in the second year at, say, 18, 19, and 20 months, or, if still later in childhood, that the three inoculations be given at intervals of one month, the first two with diphtheria toxoid, the third with smallpox. Thus the child is protected against two important diseases of childhood and the danger of encephalitis is obviated.

Dr. Armstrong is not dogmatic about the plan. He thinks it is in accord with facts that have been accumulating since 1916. The results of certain laboratory experiments appear to sustain the proposal. He therefore asks that it be given trial.

TREATMENT OF HIVES.

Mrs. M. W. C. writes: My 6 year old daughter has had hives almost constantl, for a year. I removed tomatoes, berries and other acid foods from her diet, but still she has the trouble. She has always been a big milk drinker and loves eggs. I removed these from her diet and the hives have disappeared.

2. Can you suggest a diet that will contain the proper vitamins for her?
3. Should she have lime water?
4. Is soy bean milk advisable?
5. If so, where and how could it be obtained?

REPLY.

1. I suggest you try giving her milk. It may be that eggs was the sole cause of her trouble. If she develops hives stop giving her milk, but try her with eggs. You should salvage one of these two good foods for her diet list.

2. Give her the ordinary mixed diet customarily used in your home. Replace milk or eggs—whichever one causes her trouble—by nuts, cereals, whole grains, and various meats. Nuts, whole grain cereals, and freshly ground whole grains are rich in lime. If she is poisoned by milk it is still possible that she can eat butter, particularly if it is home made and most of the milk and water has been worked out of it. It is possible she can eat some cheeses.

3. No.
4. It may be.
5. I think you may have to make it. There is a soy bean powdered milk on the market.

APPLE SAUCE.

G. V. I. writes: My opponent contends that it is unsafe to eat roast pork without apple sauce; that the latter is served with pork to prevent poisoning in case the pork should be slightly spoiled. My contention is that if the pork is sufficiently spoiled to poison eating any quantity of apple sauce will not prevent it. Who is right?

REPLY.

You are. Apple sauce is a food and not an antidote. Good pork is just as wholesome as good beef. Spoiled meat cannot be saved, whether beef or pork, by apple sauce or anything else.

LEGAL ACTION NECESSARY.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—[Friend of the People].—A building adjoining mine was devastated by fire almost a year ago. It has never been renovated and is now in a frightful condition—a mar to the community and a menace and danger to children playing near it. In rainy weather a very pungent and disagreeable odor issues forth from it, making my tenants ill. I sincerely hope that something can be done to remedy this condition. I. S.

In regard to the building referred to by the writer which was damaged by fire, the owner was notified three times to put building in good and safe condition or wreck same. He failed to comply with these notices. This matter has now been referred to the law department for prosecution.

JOHN E. ERICSSON,
Deputy, Dept. of Buildings.

CATCH BASIN.

Chicago, Sept. 11.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—The property opposite ours relies on our catch basin. The rain washes the ground into it and stuffs it, frequently flooding the basement. Can anything be done to compel the owner to remedy this? At present we both share one sewer in the walk, but the inlet is to my basin. P. S.

Much depends upon the agreement under which the catch basin was installed. It seems probable that the best course would be for you to attempt to reach some agreement with your neighbor for preventing the washing of soil.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

TRANSFER OF TITLE.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My brother died a short time ago leaving no will. His wife survives, there being no children. The personal property he left is so arranged that his estate need not be probated. The only real property he had is ten acres of land in Florida which he bought in 1902, before his marriage, and is in his name only. We believe the land is of little value, the 1931 taxes being $2.60, based on an assessed valuation of $40. To have his estate probated to have the land placed in his wife's name would be too expensive. His brothers and sister, the only other heirs who survive him, are all of age and would join in the transfer to put the property in her name. 1. What would you advise be done? 2. I understand, under circumstances such as these in Illinois, the property could be placed in the wife's name if all parties interested transferred their interests in the property to her. 3. Also, that the title and trust company would guarantee title in case of sale when necessary affidavits were furnished as to heirship, with bond required. He left no debts.

F. C. K.

1. Make the transfer and when you come to sell try to persuade the purchaser to waive probate.
2. Even here it would not make a merchantable title in absence of probate.
3. The bond would be the important thing. They could afford to guarantee any title, however doubtful, if a sufficient bond were furnished them.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

SEPTEMBER 17, 1916.

CHICAGO.—In the arrest of six men and three women from the Tyson apartments at 43d street and Grand boulevard, agents of the department of justice believe they have the principal members of a brilliantly directed blackmail trust which has cleaned up more than $250,000 within the last few months operating here, in New York, and Philadelphia. Numbered among the victims of the clever band are men and women of social prominence in the three cities. One victim is Mrs. Regina S. Clifford of Philadelphia. Hinton G. Clabaugh, chief of the Chicago department of justice branch, said that he would not make public the names of the others at present. His investigations have turned up an amazing web of blackmailing work, which includes all branches in that fertile field from the ancient badger game to the beguilement of philandering men of family into compromising positions and the psychological demand to kick in.

BERLIN.—Russian and Rumanian troops have been driven back on the Danube river in the most disastrous defeat suffered by any allied army since the Serbians were whipped a year ago. Again it is the iron hand of Field Marshal von Mackensen that has pressed down in the Balkans. Engineering the same kind of a steam roller that crushed Serbia, Von Mackensen has flung the Rumanians back as far as sixty miles at some points in Dobrudja. The latest reports show that the routed Rumanians have reached the Tzernavoda-Medjidie-Constanza line and the fate of the whole army fighting in Dobrudja depends on the combats in this district. The retreat of the czar's and King Ferdinand's men has been in progress since Sept. 14. It began after a terrific three days' battle in which, official reports show, two whole divisions and many minor units were completely destroyed.

LONDON.—Reports from allied sources ignore almost entirely the Dobrudja fighting, but describe a great victory against the German-Bulgar forces in Macedonia. A report from Paris says the Serbians have thrown the enemy right wing back within three miles of the Serbo-Greek frontier northeast of Florina, which has been recaptured from the invaders. The report that Kavala, the Greek port on the Black sea recently occupied by the Bulgarians, is now under fire of the allied fleet has been confirmed. All civilians were warned to withdraw.

LONDON.—British troops continue advancing near Ancre river on the Somme front. The French have pressed forward at two points. Berlin reports indicate that the enemy has reached a point where they can open a direct attack on Combles.

ROME.—The Italians continue to pound away at the Austrians in an effort to cut their way through to Triest on the Adriatic sea. Giant guns pave the way for infantry attacks, which are admitted by Vienna to be of the most vicious character. Rome claims gains, but Vienna insists the Austrians are holding their lines.

EL PASO, Tex.—Villa attacked Chihuahua City with 600 men and penetrated part of the city, but was driven out with heavy losses by the Constitutionalist army. The captured Villa followers were killed.

NEW YORK.—Horace White, formerly editor in chief of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and late editor in chief of the New York Evening Post, died at his residence, 18 west 69th street, after a long illness. He was 82 years old. He was one of the country's leading journalists and a survivor of the group of distinguished editors, which included Charles A. Dana and Whitelaw Reid. He was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln. During the famous debates between Lincoln and Douglas in 1858 Mr. White was assigned by Dr. C. H. Ray, editor of THE TRIBUNE, to travel through Illinois with Lincoln in his campaign for the senatorship.

AN AMAZING BRIDGE DEAL.

Chicago, Sept. 13.—Our card foursome began our season tonight. South shuffled and West cut during a conversation and South dealt. Each of the four had ace-king-nine-five; South in spades, East in hearts, North in clubs, West in diamonds.

Each had a queen-eight-four; South in diamonds, East in spades, North in hearts, West in clubs.

Each had jack-seven-three; South in clubs, East in diamonds, North in spades, West in hearts.

Each had ten-six-two; South in hearts, East in clubs, North in diamonds, West in spades.

Therefore each player had one of each number from ace down to two with no duplicates.

All passed because the hands seemed so trivial, and in putting them down two of the players discovered the ace-king-nine-five combination, which drew the attention of the other two, and on a closer comparison the other coincidences were discovered.

Partners had ace-king-jack-nine-seven-five-three of a suit, and queen-ten-eight-six-four-two of another.

What peculiar law of probability was invoked by that deal? We think it much more singular than thirteen of a suit. Possibly others may find combinations I have not mentioned, but I can't work them out, for it's after 1 o'clock.

ONE OF FOUR.

REPLYING TO SECRETARY MILLS.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Gov. Roosevelt has stated that lower tariffs to permit foreign trade will ease the settlement of war debts. To confute this, Secretary Mills gave us this clever poser: Suppose that citizens of a debtor country sold their goods here at a 10 per cent profit, and suppose that their government somehow got hold of that 10 per cent to apply to its debt to our government, then in order for that 10 per cent to cover the war debts the total price of the foreign goods sold here, according to Secretary Mills, would have to equal $300,000,000,000! How awful! But he should have set his figure twice as high, and made it twice as frightening, for the war debts amount to 60 billion [funded over a period of 62 years, incidentally].

There is a plausibility about any description so simple as Mills', the only fault with his being that it doesn't describe any actual situation. He implies that a debtor government depends exclusively upon the profits of exporters for an income to meet foreign debts. Actually, a debtor government will meet its obligations out of any funds it pleases from whatever taxes it can raise, and foreign trade has no direct bearing on the problem. After the money is raised, however, another problem arises—how to transfer the payment—and on this problem foreign trade has vital bearing. The payment must be made in U. S. dollars or in gold. Gold cannot be spared by many nations without threatening the reserve supply which supports their currency. And dollars cannot be had except as they accumulate in that debtor country in payment for goods, i. e., except as there is a balance of trade with the U. S. in favor of the debtor nation. When dollars have thus accumulated, the debtor government simply buys them from its citizens with its native money raised by taxation. The total amount of U. S. importing does not matter, except that it must exceed exporting by at least the payment received on debt. To say, as Mills said, that imports must equal ten times, or any other number or fraction of times, the debt payment is ludicrous.

JOBS IN WISCONSIN.

Wauwatosa, Wis., Sept. 13.—On page 10 in your editorial column there was an editorial headed "Driving Jobs Out of Wisconsin," in which you quote Walter J. Kohler, candidate for the governorship of Wisconsin, relative to the closing of the Chevrolet plant at Janesville. To any one acquainted with the automobile business it is well known that the source of profit in operating assembly plants occurs from the differential in freight rates on parts shipped to an assembly plant and then charging the buyer the full rate from the home plant on the finished car delivered to the point of purchase. Had your editorial writer sought the truth you in all probability would have found that the reason the Janesville Chevrolet plant was shut down was not because of taxes but because of the low ebb into automobile sales and a still more dismal outlook for the balance of this year, which in all probability made it impossible to operate this plant on a profitable basis.

Why be so asinine as to try to hang a condition which affects the whole nation upon the tax policy of one state?

Furthermore, for years papers like your own have been agitating grade separation in the interest of safety and the prevention of accidents. And now because the La Follettes really put through a program of grade separation for the state of Wisconsin it is all wet because, politically, they are not on the same side of the fence nor will they take their instructions from the men who would like to control affairs.

In your propaganda for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment you have stated repeatedly that bringing back beer would not only put men directly to work in this industry but would indirectly give employment to thousands of other men supplying materials and products to the breweries. Why doesn't this apply also when it comes to grade separations? What about the gasoline and oil consumed and the tires worn out on the trucks used in this work? How about the work given to men in the plants manufacturing the cement and reinforcing material used in these overhead structures? What about the wages paid to these men that have gone to local merchants for foodstuffs and clothing to keep themselves and their families going? Is there no indirect profit or benefit because Phil La Follette carried through this program?

Further, how is it possible, if the Wisconsin progressives are only interested in taxing business to death, that the Nash Motor Car company has one of the largest cash reserves of any motor car manufacturer?

HIGH SCHOOL ELIGIBILITY RULES.

Chicago, Sept. 8.—Before the schools open, I would like to remark about a certain school rule that was just passed last year by the principals of all the schools.

The rule is as follows: If a boy fails in school and makes the subjects up in summer school, the credits count towards his graduation but they do not make him eligible for athletics the following year.

Let us say a boy goes through three years of hard work in athletics and when he is in his last year and his playing might mean something for him the principal will not let him play. However, nothing is said of all the bruises and injuries he has taken for honor of his school.

I am the mother of this boy and I think the rule is very unfair. To me a credit is a credit and should be regarded as such. V. W.

1,500 BOLIVIANS TRAPPED IN CHACO FACE STARVATION

Jungle Retreat Cut Off by Paraguayan Army.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Sept. 16.—The alternative of starvation or surrender is facing a Bolivian force of 1,500 men, according to an unofficial report from Fort Boqueron, in the disputed Gran Chaco area. Paraguayan troops, the report said, have cut off the retreat of the Bolivian troops in the dense jungle between Fort Boqueron and Fort Arce. The Bolivians were said to be making desperate efforts to reach Fort Arce before their water supply gives out.

Atrocity Report Angers Bolivia.

LA PAZ, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Residents of La Paz coursed through the streets tonight in a demonstration demanding that Asuncion, the capital of Paraguay, be bombed from the air.

The demand resulted from reports that Paraguayan troops had attacked and killed Bolivian stretcher bearers who were evacuating the wounded from one of the battle grounds in the Gran Chaco.

Gen. Quintanilla, who sent the report of the alleged attacks from Fort Munoz, Bolivian general staff headquarters in the Chaco, said the Paraguayan troops were ignorant of the convention of Geneva which forbids such operations. The bayonet was being used by the Paraguayans on some of their own men who had been made captive by the Bolivians, the general asserted. Bolivia will protest to the league of nations.

Bolivia Sets Truce Terms.

In a note to Francis White, president of the commission of neutrals at Washington, Bolivia declared it was ready, under certain condition, to cease military action.

"Bolivia," the note said, "facing a strong Paraguayan offensive attack, finds it impossible either to disarm or withdraw ten kilometers without jeopardizing itself. Such an agreement must be mutually conformed with. Moreover, in the matter of withdrawing, we beg to inform you that it is impossible because of the layout of the area.

"We think that once a suspension of hostilities has been agreed upon, new clashes need not be feared because none of the parties would fail its pledged word. If it be deemed some guaranties are necessary, they can be agreed upon. We heartily affirm that we are willing to enter into negotiations for a fundamental solution of the dispute."

Paraguay Bids for Peace.

ASUNCION, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Paraguay in a note to the neutral governments at Washington today conditionally accepted suspension of hostilities against Bolivia in the Gran Chaco. The conditions are:

1. Each army must withdraw 60 kilometers from 60 degrees west longitude [the 60 degree line runs directly through the battle front] within three days after suspension has been ordered.

2. Within two weeks thereafter the Bolivians must retire to 62.5 degrees, and the Paraguayans to the banks of the Paraguay river.

3. Meanwhile a fair demobilization will be negotiated.

The note pointed out that it was necessary for Paraguay to take precautions essential to its security.

Brazilian Troops Take Lorena.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Federal troops, driving forward against the Sao Paulo rebels in the Parahyba river valley, took the town of Lorena, their principal objective, it was announced today. The rebels concentrated at Guarantingueta after the federal forces occupied Lorena. In the last four days federal forces totaling 25,000 men have advanced forty miles.

Taken to Hospital

MRS. WILLIAM E. BORAH.

Boise, Idaho, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Mary E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah, was taken to St. Luke's hospital here today suffering from a high fever and congestion in one lung. A statement by her physician said: "Her illness is probably due to influenza, but the diagnosis should be definitely established within 24 hours on completion of laboratory tests."

BRITISH EARL OF 'TURPITUDE' FAME DIES IN FRANCE

Was Involved in U. S. Ban on Countess Vera.

PAU, France, Sept. 16.—The fifth earl of Craven, whose escapades with Vera, countess of Cathcart, stirred up a storm which nearly resulted in an international incident between the United States and Great Britain in 1926, died here today at the age of 35.

The incident of 1926 began when the countess of Cathcart was barred from the United States by immigration authorities because she had been divorced on statutory grounds. She was accused of "moral turpitude." Her husband when he won the divorce in 1922 had named the earl of Craven as co-respondent. Eighteen months later the countess and the earl lived together in South Africa.

Earl Flees to Canada.

The countess fought the expulsion order, declaring that if she were barred, the earl should also be refused admittance on the same grounds. The earl already had been admitted. The case was taken to the federal courts and also aired on the floor of the United States senate and in the British house of commons.

Immigration authorities, wishing to question the earl, issued an order for his arrest. He fled to Montreal. When she learned of his flight, the countess branded him a "coward." Later the countess won her fight and was admitted to the United States.

She sold her play, "Ashes of Love," and performed in it under Earl Carroll's management for a few nights before it closed a failure. Countess Vera gained further notoriety during this period when she was present at Earl Carroll's famous "bathtub party," at which a show girl bathed in a tub of wine while the men present passed by in line and drank of the wine. Carroll was sentenced to prison for this episode.

Had Brilliant Military Career.

Born July 13, 1897, the earl of Craven succeeded to the title of his father in 1921. He had one of the most remarkable careers of the British nobility. He was disabled through the loss of his right leg and permanent disability to his left arm in the war and later became bankrupt and was disinherited.

The earl was educated at Eton and served with honors as a lieutenant in the Hampshire regiment during the war. In 1916 he married Mary Wilhelmina George, daughter of William George, town clerk at Invergordon, Scotland. He was 19 and she was 18. They had one son, William, Viscount Uffington, who is now 15.

The countess of Cathcart was married and divorced twice after the 1926 incident. The earl of Catheart died in 1928 and left his ex-wife a $2,500 annuity. The countess of Craven sued for divorce in 1925, naming Vera as co-respondent, but later there was a reconciliation.

GANG KILLING STUMPS POLICE.

The inquest into the death of Walter Zwolinski, reputed member of the Downs-McGoghegan south side beer gang, was closed yesterday with the customary verdict of murder by persons unknown. Zwolinski was found shot in his automobile in an alley near 54th street and Artesian avenue on Sept. 2.

REFUSES USE OF TROOPS TO BREAK FARM BLOCKADE

Iowa Governor Balks at Military Aid.

Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 16.—(AP)—State military aid having been refused them by Gov. Dan Turner, Sioux City and Woodbury county authorities today were laying plans for clearing nearby highways of farmers' holiday pickets.

Secrecy surrounded the moves of the officials in trying to end a costly embargo on farm products, which has been in force here since the National Farmers' Holiday association began a campaign for higher agricultural prices more than a month ago.

Gov. Dan Turner declared "there are negotiations pending now" that he thinks will "iron out" soon the difficulties of the situation. He gave assurances that the National Guard will not be called out, at present at least, although their aid was asked by Sheriff John A. Davenport, and County Attorney Ralph Prichard.

Plans Kept Secret.

What the negotiations are, Gov. Turner did not say, but Mayor W. D. Hayes of Sioux City said late today he would confer with Davenport and Prichard about the next step in breaking the embargo.

Meanwhile, Police Judge H. R. Kenaston sentenced six pickets, found guilty of unlawful assembly, to 30 day jail sentences or $100 fines each. Double penalties were imposed on two who were convicted of disorderly conduct. The charges grew out of an attack on a blockade runner. All sentences were appealed to the District court.

Today's developments were an outgrowth of a ruse last night in which holiday sympathizers, posted near Correctionville, telephoned deputies and pretended they were truckers asking escorts through the picket lines.

About 500 holiday adherents awaited the officers and pelted them with rocks and clubs on their arrival. Several deputies received minor injuries. Eighty special deputies previously arrested 24 pickets.

Begin Picketing in Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Picketing by a small group of unemployed and farmers began on one Minnesota highway today, while plans for large scale activity to discourage farm marketing were announced in another community.

The small group, stopping trucks and urging occupants to withhold crops from market in the hope of forcing higher prices, was camped near Bemidji, Minn.

Greece Sends Warship to Curb Monarchist Plot

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The political situation is becoming more tense in Greece with the approach of a general election scheduled for Sept. 25. Government information has confirmed a report that Monarchists on the island of Corfu have said if they obtain a majority they will abolish the Democratic constitution. The government has sent a warship with troops to the island to maintain order.

FOUR HELD AFTER ACQUITTAL; CALL REARREST UNFAIR

Four men, freed last night by a jury in the court of Judge John Prystalski and arrested again as they left the courtroom, complained bitterly of a lack of sportsmanship on the part of Assistant State's Attorney Robert Donigan.

"What's the matter with him. Can't he take it on the chin? We beat him fair and square," declared Fred Reilly, 28 years old, 3631 Wallace street.

Reilly and his companions, Michael Dunn, 28 years old, 635 West 46th street; Edward Morrisey, 22 of 511 West 46th place, and Edward Roche, 18 of 4456 Wallace street, were kept in the detective bureau over their protests.

The four men were tried twice for robbing Charles Martinkus in his delicatessen at 700 West 59th street on March 7. The first trial, without a jury, was held before Judge Joseph B. David, who found them guilty but granted the retrial in which they were found not guilty. Mr. Donigan said he would have Martinkus' wife place new charges of robbery against them today.

FIND HOPE IN CONTRACT PRICE OF MILK HERE

Producers are getting more for milk in contract markets such as Chicago, which is served by more than 18,000 farmer milk producers in southern Wisconsin and northern Illinois and Indiana, than the prevailing market price of milk used in manufacturing.

This was one of the hopeful reports made during the three day agricultural outlook conference at the Stevens hotel, where representatives of corn belt agricultural colleges and state crop statisticians yesterday concluded an annual round table sponsored by the United States department of agriculture through its bureau of agricultural economics.

Dr. C. L. Holmes presented a nation-wide dairying report which was substantiated and localized by R. V. Gunn for Michigan, Walter H. Ebling, Wisconsin, and L. G. Allbaugh, Iowa.

BODY TAKEN FROM HARBOR.

The body of Franklin Moais, 21 years old, 6400 Normal boulevard, who was drowned last Tuesday when a rowboat overturned in the harbor of the Chicago Yacht club off Monroe street, was recovered there yesterday by the coast guard.

THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR RESULTS!

THAT bargain set of books you bought but never read is the most expensive reading matter in your house. It isn't the amount of money you spend that counts, but the enjoyment, service, or benefit you get.

What you pay per word or per line for want advertising means nothing. You're not buying type or ink or paper. What you're interested in solely is results. Read what these people quoted here today say about results obtained with Tribune Want Ads during the past few weeks. Then remember—

The lowest want ad rate is the highest if you don't rent the apartment, sell the car, get a buyer for your house, or do any of the hundreds of things that effective want advertising can do for you.

You can't possibly get results from want ads printed in a medium which the public doesn't read or isn't inclined to respond to.

Experienced want ad users know that paper, ink, and circulation alone do not produce results. Without confidence in the medium which carries it, the most legitimate offer goes unheeded.

For twenty years the Chicago Tribune has built reader confidence by rigidly censoring all want advertising offered it.

The Tribune does not permit its readers to be exploited by unscrupulous advertisers.

Vigilantly this newspaper guards its columns against misrepresentation, extravagant claims, sharp practices, and fraud.

It does not permit the confidence of readers in all advertising to be undermined by the questionable operations of a few advertisers. Neither openly nor carelessly does it tolerate shady dealing in any form.

It does not ask reputable advertisers to carry this burden and so increase their cost of doing business.

It does not force some advertisers to compete at a disadvantage by favoring a special few.

The Tribune does not make inside deals or concessions.

It does not give away advertising to some while charging others.

It does not offer secret rebates; nor allow reruns, except for legitimate reasons.

It insists that all advertisers enjoy equal opportunities, pay promptly and at regular card rates.

These are some of the reasons why the Tribune is the preferred advertising medium of reputable want advertisers.

— why the Tribune gets better, quicker results for want advertisers than any other Chicago newspaper.

— why during the first eight months of 1932, as it has for the past 20 years, the Tribune printed more want advertising than any other Chicago newspaper.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The biggest building in New York was dedicated to public service today, and the old costly, haphazard method of gathering and delivering freight from six railroad piers will be abandoned. The new 16 million dollar Union Inland terminal, designed to speed up freight transportation on Manhattan island, is ready to function under the supervision of the Port of New York authority.

The terminal is more than a big building. It is the solution of one of the city's major transportation problems. The centralized freight depot will bring unity and economy to the transfer of all goods to and from the 11 railroads serving the city. It will occupy the same position in relation to less than carload lots of freight that the postoffice does to the mail the postmen collect. Trucks will not have to lumber over half the town to pick up consignments from the north, east, south, and west. One call will suffice, whether it be incoming or outgoing freight.

Covers Entire Square Block.

This city of skyscrapers is accustomed to point with pride to the height of its buildings. Fifteen story structures are seldom cited as landmarks. The terminal, however, covers the entire block bounded by 8th and 9th avenues between 15th and 16th streets. It contains almost 37½ million cubic feet as compared with the mighty Empire State building's 36 million cubic feet.

This heap of setback steel and masonry is pleasing to the architectural eye. It is a monster building, constructed to eliminate waste motion and save money.

How It Will Operate.

Today the vast first floor with its 300 truck spaces and 270,000 square feet loading and unloading platforms was opened for service. October 3 will mark the opening of the second floor offering almost duplicate facilities. The remaining 13 floors of which 700,000 square feet have already been rented for commercial purposes will be opened as each one is completed, the last not later than Jan. 1.

Here is the way the terminal operates: All goods in less than carload lots from all points and via all railroads will be delivered to the central state. Freight for domestic export will be distributed there. The railroads will deliver and pickup the freight. The old railroad piers will be turned back to the steamship companies for the shipment of foreign freight.

Cuts Cost 50 Per Cent.

Previously a New York truckman had to berth his truck at least six times, pay freight charges each time, search for his goods and then travel about five miles an hour through the city's work-a-day traffic. Trucking costs about 6 cents a minute in this town and it used to cost more to deliver the freight from the pier to retailer than it did to ship it cross country from fairly distant points. The new terminal eliminates all his waste motion and cuts the cost more than 50 per cent. It will revolutionize the handling of freight in New York City. The upper floors will also aid various industries.

"As an example of how the building can serve manufacturers," points out Howard S. Cullman, chairman of the terminal for the port authority, "let us assume the sixth floor is to be occupied by a maker of hats. He may receive his rough product from Connecticut. The truck, on arriving at the terminal, is raised with its contents to the sixth floor. The finished product is loaded onto a truck and carried down the same way. It is 'store-door' delivery.

15 Huge Elevators.

There are 15 huge elevators each with a capacity of 40,000 pounds and the platforms seventeen by thirty-four feet. In addition 12 special package elevators are available for small packages for metropolitan delivery.

The new freight terminal is the first of three planned by the port authority.

AUTO DRIVEN BY 18 YEAR OLD BOY KILLS CADDY, 21

William McGlone, 21 years old, 15934 South Marshfield avenue, Harvey, was killed last night by an automobile driven by John Vaughan, 18 years old, at Park avenue and Governor's highway in Homewood. Vaughan, the son of Dr. Roger T. Vaughan, professor at Rush Medical college of the University of Chicago, was held for the inquest this morning.

McGlone a caddy at the Ravisloe Country club was walking home with his brothers James and Cornelius, also caddies. They were debating which route to take home when the automobile struck William. Vaughan lives with his father on the latter's farm in Bremen township.

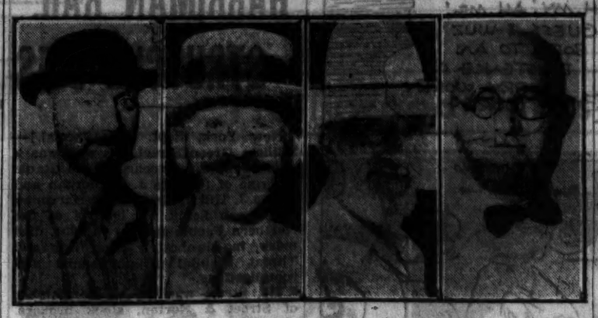
Americans Seek Options on Scotch Whisky Supply

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Americans here are reported to be sounding out Scottish distilleries about large purchases of whisky on an optional basis. This follows an announcement that the Scottish distilleries are closing on account of the depression and heavy taxation. Some American and French buying of distillers' shares is also reported as anticipatory of better exports. The French markets also are forecasting better times for wine producers and distributors should the United States abandon prohibition.

"Whisker Club" Fights Depression



Four members of new Mustache club organized recently at Norfolk, Neb., to stop talk about hard times. The members will wear beards "until good times come back again." A whisker parade will also be held at the coming fall festival. Left to right: Raymond Craft, Stein Tonseth, Bill Steinberg, and Frank Schula with their distinctive types of whiskers. [Acme Photos.]

CITY MAY SAVE BY BUYING ITS COAL AT MINES

Would Pay Railroads with Warrants.

The city may buy its winter's supply of coal on an f. o. b. mine basis instead of on a basis of delivery at city buildings, Commissioner of Public Works Sprague said yesterday after bids on the delivery basis had been opened.

COL. SPRAGUE.

The indicated willingness of several railroads to accept tax warrants in payment of freight on the coal is the reason for the suggested change in the buying plan. Col. Sprague also pointed out that under the interstate commerce act a railroad may grant a municipality credit on freight, but is prohibited from granting such credit to a private company.

Pay with Tax Warrants.

In view of the city's financial condition it seems probable that the companies which furnish the city coal will have to accept tax warrants in payment or wait many months for cash payment. Presumably, this factor is reflected in their bids. By purchasing on a mine delivery basis and paying freight, which is a considerable factor in the cost of Chicago coal, in tax warrants at par, the city would avoid a large percentage of these invisible carrying charges contained in bids on basis of delivery in Chicago.

Since the companies which bid on the coal contracts yesterday own their own mines in most cases, they probably would be the bidders under the new plan, Col. Sprague said he will investigate the proposition further and may recommend purchases on a mine basis to the city council.

Uses 600 Tons a Day.

The city uses approximately 600 tons of coal a day in its various public buildings and pumping stations. The low bids this year averaged 10 cents a ton lower than bids to furnish a similar quality of coal last year.

The low bidders and their bids on delivery at pumping stations and buildings which have switch tracks so that the coal may be delivered without truck hauls follow: Cosgrave Coal company, low on four pumping stations, $2.45 a ton; Consolidated Coal company, low on one pumping station, $2.85 a ton; Wisconsin Lime and Cement company, low on one pumping station, $3.31; Bell & Zoller, low on the Bridewell power plant, $3.11 a ton.

Delivered Price Higher.

The low bids on locations where it is necessary to deliver coal by truck follow: Wisconsin Lime and Cement company, city hall, police building, and one pumping station, $3.39 a ton; Consumers company, one pumping station, $3.67 a ton; Crerar-Clinch Coal company, one pumping station, $3.05 a ton.

The bids were taken under advisement pending an analysis of the offers by City Engineer Myron B. Reynolds and decision upon the proposal to call for bids f. o. b. the mines.

BANDIT KILLERS HELD WITHOUT BOND FOR MURDER

Francis Crotty, 21 years old, 7545 Wentworth avenue, and Peter Balciulus, 4344 South Wood street, were held to the grand jury without bond yesterday by Judge Frank M. Padden on charges of murder and robbery. During the robbery of a meat market at 5956 South Halsted street last Tuesday Crotty shot and killed the owner, Ernest Kampert, and seriously wounded Edward Kirsch, a butcher. Balciulus was Crotty's partner in the holdup.

They were arrested shortly after the murder in an apartment at 7903 Rhodes avenue.

"I got nervous and started shooting," Crotty told detectives after his arrest. He made a full confession.

COMMERCE GROUP INDORSES R. F. C. HOUSING PROJECT

Urges Legislature to Pass Enabling Act.

After a warning from Alfred K. Stern, chairman of the Illinois housing commission, that Illinois must act promptly if it wants to get any of the Reconstruction Finance corporation appropriation for housing members of the Construction industries council of the Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday indorsed the proposed housing act now before the emergency session of the general assembly.

ALFRED K. STERN.

Mr. Stern cautioned the construction men who met at the Great Northern hotel that unless the legislature showed more signs of life there may not be a dollar left for housing projects in Illinois. New York already has secured $100,000,000 from the R. F. C., he stated, and four other states have called special sessions and are racing to get legislation passed which will enable them to go into housing on a big scale. These four are Massachusetts, Ohio, New Jersey, and Alabama.

Need of Low Rental Housing.

Mr. Stern declared there is need of modern low rental housing in Chicago; that a recent survey made by the state housing commission showed 2,000 families now paying up to $8 per room in inadequate quarters. A new market for homes will be established, he said, if rentals can be reduced to $8 or lower per room per month.

"To reach this potential market," he said, "we need cheap land and cheap labor. The enabling legislation which we hope will be passed at Springfield will give any Illinois city the right to purchase land at a reasonable price, that is, ten or twenty blocks, or large outlying areas.

Work for Unemployed.

"The question of competition will be kept down to a minimum, for there'll be no building where it isn't needed. The idea is not socialistic nor unsound from any point of view. Its purpose is to encourage private industry to produce modern housing at a price we haven't been able to reach in the past.

"Of course the immediate issue is to create jobs rather than to get cash. We want work for the unemployed, not a dole. The program outlined by the Commercial club of Chicago calls for $100,000,000 in construction of this type in Illinois next year."

ROBBED AND LOCKED IN ICEBOX.

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Held up by two men who posed as customers, Ben Rudman was locked in the refrigerator at his grocery store here last night. The bandits escaped with $150. Rudman escaped through a door unknown to the robbers.

TWO LICENSES, ONLY ONE GIRL; WEDDING HALTS

Mother Gives Aid to Older Swain.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Is blonde Olive Bell Hamon, 21, once the spoiled baby girl of murdered Jake Hamon, Oklahoma oil king, going to marry Forrest C. Cross, 28, who obtained a license to wed her, or will her mother lead her to the altar with Pedro Llanuza, 52 year old newspaper cartoonist?

This proved more than a minute mystery as it sped through a series of bewildering acts today. Tonight the principals in the mystery cast their ballots this way:

Mrs. Josephine Hamon Worth, mother of the some-time-bride-to-be: "Weren't Mr. Cross and my baby naughty children to get a license to marry? I think Mr. Cross is a nice young man, but I believe that it is better to marry for bread than love. Mr. Llanuza is better able to provide for my baby."

She's on Vaudeville Stage.

Miss Hamon, known on the stage, where she plays fifteen instruments in a vaudeville act, as Loma Worth: "I have nothing to say, mamma . . ."

Cross: "I don't know why Loma is changing her mind about marrying me, but I suspect a reason. Maybe her mother has something to say about it. I feel that I've rogued enough already. After all I come of a good family down in Virginia and I have a good job."

Llanuza: "An airplane is flying papers here from Illinois so that I can marry Loma tomorrow."

Their Plans Go Awry.

The mystery began unrolling yesterday morning when Miss Hamon, whose father was murdered by a nephew's beautiful young wife, Clara Smith, appeared at the marriage license bureau at city hall. Cross, a former marine corps lieutenant, who lives in Brooklyn, was with the shaggy haired blonde and they obtained a license to marry without difficulty. They said they intended to have the Rev. Charles I. Truby of New York's Fifth Avenue, perform the ceremony yesterday afternoon.

But they were not married. With Mamma Hamon-Worth came along Llanuza, who has a daughter as old as his intended bride, applied for a license to marry Miss Hamon this morning. The girl was along and her request for two licenses in two days to marry different men gave license bureau officials pause. They discovered that they could not issue a license because Llanuza, already twice married, lacked papers of his second divorce decree, which he says he received in Illinois.

Papers Coming by Plane.

The cartoonist said he would return tomorrow with the papers flown here from Chicago. Miss Hamon returned to her mother's suite at the Hotel Lenox.

Cross tonight was undecided what to do. It appeared he might decide to step out of the picture.

NEW HEAD OF LEGION PLEDGES HE'LL BATTLE FOR DRY LAW REPEAL

Portland, Ore., Sept. 16.—(AP)—With the work and pleasures of another national convention behind them, the "boys" of the American Legion were homeward bound today.

Stevens said good-by to his staff at a dinner here last night and was presented a wrist watch by his coworkers.

Commander Johnson told the Legionnaires he would abide by the mandates of the convention. Resolutions adopted, he said, will not be mere pieces of paper but statements of principles for which he and his staff will wage a determined fight.

He said he would do his utmost to win support for both the bonus payment and prohibition repeal demands.

OPPOSES BONUS PAYMENT NOW, SO HE QUITS LEGION

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Phelps Newberry, treasurer of the American Legion Convention corporation, which planned and handled the 1931 national Legion convention in Detroit, resigned from the Legion today because of disagreement with the stand taken at Portland, Ore., in favor of immediate payment of the bonus.

His letter of resignation tendered to Charles A. Larned Post said:

"In view of the official action recently taken by the American Legion at its annual convention in Portland, Ore., at which a resolution was passed urging immediate payment of the so-called bonus, I regret I must tender my resignation from the Legion.

"Feeling as I do that the payment of the bonus at this time is not only wrong in principle but, economically unsound, I can no longer justify my membership in an organization whose views on a matter of such supreme national importance, if adopted by the congress, will plunge the country into financial chaos."

Newberry recently accepted the Michigan chairmanship of the National Economy league.

POLICE DRIVE 1,000 PICKETS FROM MINE AREA

Eviction at Braidwood Is Carried Out Calmly.

More than 1,000 striking miner pickets were sent away without violence yesterday from the strip mine district surrounding Braidwood in Will county. The pickets, riding in 78 automobiles, were lined up by state highway police and deputy sheriffs and escorted homeward toward the Springfield and Peoria districts.

An automobile accident in which two state policemen were injured occurred during the otherwise uneventful march. Policeman John Mason, 1727 North Sawyer avenue, accompanied by Policeman Victor Slezak, 607 Circle drive, pulled his automobile out of the line moving south in state route No. 4. Met by the speeding automobile of a deputy sheriff, Mason pulled his car into the ditch to avoid a collision. The automobile overturned and Mason suffered eight broken ribs, a broken leg and arm. Slezak escaped with cuts and bruises.

State Police Take Action.

Shortly after daybreak, Chief Walter L. Moody and 50 state policemen gathered to disperse the pickets and prevent recurrence of the violence of Thursday, when two pickets were shot while trying to stop work at the mines operating the new $5 basic wage scale. Reinforced by 40 deputy sheriffs from Will and Grundy counties, the policemen moved to the strip mine of the Northern Illinois Coal corporation, a mile north of Braidwood.

As the pickets began to arrive at the mine in a cavalcade of automobiles they were waved on along the hard road by the waiting policemen. The pickets sought other roads to the mine property but found them all in control of deputies and police.

Returning to their camp on the outskirts of Coal City, six miles west of Braidwood, the picketers were met by another group of guards under command of Chief Moody. The camp was ordered cleared and Chief Moody told the strikers that they were to be escorted to their homes. There was no resistance as the cars were lined up, guarded by police in cars and motorcycle policemen, and moved south on state route No. 4.

Two Shot in Outbreak.

The clash between miners and pickets on Thursday near the Northern Illinois mine was followed by the shooting of two pickets later in the day when they tried to keep an unidentified miner from passing through their line. He drew a revolver and wounded Fiori Muzzarelli, 27, and John Montle, 32, both of Farmington. Neither of the men was seriously hurt.

NAB MAGISTRATE AND 5 OTHERS ON ASSAULT CHARGE

Police Magistrate Charles Rajsl and five young men of Dixmoor were arrested last night on charges of assaulting Joseph Loback, 17 years old, who lives at 141st street and Winchester avenue, Dixmoor. Loback told Police Magistrate Joseph S. Flaherty of Harvey the six men beat him and tore off his clothes in the suburb after accusing him of being an informer for Mayor Charles Special. Magistrate Rajsl has announced that he will be a candidate for mayor against Special next spring. Recently the mayor transferred cases from Rajsl's court to that of Flaherty. Rajsl was released on bond with Louis, Charles and Jerry Zak, Charles Jerze, and Andrew Sanre. Trial was set for Sept. 23.

BUY ARMORED AUTOS FOR PRESIDENT'S USE IN SOUTH AMERICA

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—A South American country, now embroiled, has sent to Pittsburgh for five armored automobiles, to be used by its president, it was learned today.

The first of the specially protected cars is being equipped at the Armstrong Motor Car Body company, 6340 Penn avenue, and will be shipped from New York by Sept. 26. All cars are to be eight cylinder sedans.

They will be lined with steel netting and armor plate steel, and will have bulletproof glass one and one-quarter inches thick, according to A. R. Forrest, manager of the motor car works. The steel plating is so hard that thermoline gas has to be used in cutting it.

After the Armstrong company is finished with its job the Federal laboratories will equip the car with tear gas bombs and machine guns.

LAWYER TELLS OF FEES FROM HOSPITAL CASES

Is Witness in Eastman Hearing.

The hearing of charges of malpractice against Dr. Lewis K. Eastman, owner of the Keystone hospital, 1623 North Kostner avenue, was resumed yesterday before the medical board of the state department of registration and education. Attorney Charles A. Scott was the principal witness. The hearing will be continued this morning, when Dr. Eastman is expected to take the witness stand.

Attorney Scott stated that he was retained by patients at the Keystone hospital at the rate of one or more a month during a three and one-half year period. All these patients had been injured in accidents and Attorney Scott contracted with them to handle suits against those responsible for the accidents, he testified. The lawyer said he received from one-third to one-half the cases of accident victims taken to the hospital for treatment.

State Charges Fee Splitting.

The state has charged that Dr. Eastman induced policemen to bring persons who had been injured in accidents to the Keystone hospital and also that the physician split attorney's fees received in settlements of damages.

"The hospital has no endowment and must subsist upon funds collected from patients," Attorney Scott testified. "In many instances, patients were sent to other hospitals, if they were found to be unable to pay their bills or if it was found that the nature of the accident in which they had been injured was not such as would result in the collection of damages."

The attorney also declared that unless damages were collected for injuries suffered in an accident, the hospital would fail to collect any money from 75 out of every 100 patients. He gave details of the settlement he obtained for Frank Pajewski, 2254 North Laramie avenue, whose leg was amputated after he had been a patient in the hospital for four months in 1930.

Gets Fee of $5,400.

"I received as my fee $5,400 of the $21,000 settlement given Pajewski," he testified. "That was less than the one-third permitted by the bar association. I took less because the youth's hospital fees were large."

Under cross-examination the attorney said: "I always asked my clients to be sure and see that the hospital was paid. That was not unusual. Approximately 75 per cent of the emergency cases at the hospital could not pay the hospital charges unless damages were collected."

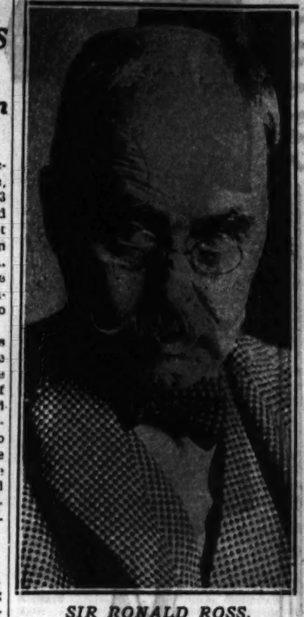
DOCTOR DIES



SIR RONALD ROSS.
[Acme Photo.]
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Sir Ronald Ross, who discovered that malaria is transmitted by anopheles mosquitos, died in London tonight, aged 75. He had been ill for many weeks and during the last five years he was paralyzed.

Sir Ronald was born May 13, 1857, at Almora, India, where his father, Sir Campbell Ross, was stationed. He entered the Indian medical service in 1881 and began his malaria research in 1893. In 1901 he discovered the malaria parasite on the wall of the mosquito's stomach. He received a knighthood and the Nobel prize for medicine in 1902 in recognition of his work.

Some years later Sir Ronald left the India service and became director of the Liverpool School of Tropical Diseases and later at King's college, London. He received numerous honors, but for many years was in straightened circumstances. He was relieved from poverty in 1928 by the sale of his papers for $10,000.

Sir Ronald was married in 1889 to Rosa Bloxam. She died last year. A son and a daughter were born to them.

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—William Green Street, 72, who was a figure behind the scenes in the titanic struggle of the late J. P. Morgan and James J. Hill against E. H. Harriman and Jacob Schiff for control of the Northern Pacific railway in 1901, died today in Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat hospital of pneumonia and complications.

Mr. Street was the senior member of Street & Norton, stock brokers. This was one of the firms with which the Morgan house placed its order to buy 100,000 shares of the railway stock on the same day that the Harriman interests had bought to buy.

In the struggle that ensued the stock jumped from 117 to 1,000. A panic followed, as shorts were unable to cover, and half of Wall street went broke in throwing other stocks overboard. The battle ended with the Morgan and Harriman interests agreeing on a settlement price of $140 and forming a holding company which the United States Supreme court ordered dissolved.

Since that time, however, Mr. Street had been little in the public eye until 1924, when he became president of the Metropolitan Jockey club and took an active interest in the annual meets at the Jamaica racetrack.

Penguin's Pay Makes Movie Actors Jealous

Special Privileges Also Become Issue.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 16.—Some of the actresses and actors on the Radio-RKO lot take it sourly that their studio is paying a salary of $150—more than they get—besides extending a lot of personal privileges, to the penguin which is enacting a part that can't be left out of the serio-tragic mystery thriller, "Penguin Pool Murder." Mr. Penguin's privileges consist in having a prop man shove a big mirror in front of Mr. Penguin every now and then so he wont get lonesome, which seems to be a penguin failing.

The penguin looks in the mirror, takes a few grave steps, shrugs his wings, and thinks he has seen his long lost Mrs. Penguin—at least that is the way they explain it at the studio. Stranger things than penguin psychology have happened in Hollywood.

In addition to the penguin's $150 a week, which goes to his promoter, a seaside concessionaire at Ocean Park, Cal., the penguin has been insured by the studio for $1,500.

They've built a reproduction of part of the New York aquarium on one of the sound stages for this picture, and in it 2,000 fish of several hundred species were carefully deposited by enthusiastic assistant directors. After an amazing number of the fish died, the assistant directors learned for the first time they must guard against the heat and light of the blazing big studio lights extracting the oxygen from the water. For the last several days they have had the water replenished constantly in the tank.

George Archainbaud is the director who is learning fish and penguin nature.

Mitzi Green, filming "Little Orphan Annie," has a birthday Oct. 22. She'll be 12 years old and says "nobody need give me anything else just so I get a nice tan polo coat for a present."

The film called "In-Ho-Tep," all about mummies, scarabs, pharaohs and reincarnations, which Universal is filming with a cast headed by Boris Karloff, originally was a story called "Cagliostro," which Nina Wilcox Putnam and Richard Schayer wrote for that studio about a totally different era. Karl Freund, director and ex-cameraman imported from Germany, is helping to fill the film with occult stuff, and Willy Pogany is designing the striking and mysterious sets for this spine tickler.

Another studio with a wish to capitalize on the current public fondness for the weird and shuddery is RKO, whose adventure story department chief, Merian Cooper, is cudgeling his brain and angling for suggestions as to a new and original way to picturize the destruction of the world. It will take place in the film "End of the World," to be begun this autumn.

Constance Bennett generally loses about five pounds during the making of a picture, but she lost nine in making "Rockabye," which all hands thought they had just completed. She may lose still more pounds, however, because the previews of "Rockabye" have resulted in the studios' decision for a lot of retakes.

Even though she feels wan and tired, Miss Bennett had sufficient of the acidulous old Bennett disposition to give a call down to a Los Angeles writer who had told the public, confidentially, that there would be a new little Bennett shortly. "Untrue, emphatically, absolutely untrue," Miss Bennett proclaimed as many stopped to listen. "You must have gotten your report out of the title of my picture," and she drove on.

In order to get to Berlin for Christmas dinner with his mother and father [his father, a semi-invalid, is taking the baths in Germany], George O'Brien is rushing through three pictures in double quick time. He finished "Golden West" with Janet Chandler one day this week, began "Robber's Roost" with Maureen O'Sullivan today, and already is getting wised up about his part in the next one, after that called "Cañon Walls." All three are westerns.

O'Brien is working for the Fox company under a contract such as no other studio holds. They offered him a regulation contract—so much a week for 40 weeks a year—but George wanted a contract which would provide a steady salary 52 weeks of the year, for which he would permit the studio to use him in as many films as it could. Other contracts generally stipulate how many films a star can be asked to appear in in one year.

Polly Moran, movie comedienne, today went through legal preliminaries to adopting a 16 year old boy. The boy, whose name Miss Moran is changing from John A. Trujillo to John Michael Moran, was taken out of St. Anne's infant home in Hollywood when the actress found him there almost fifteen years ago.

The Accessory Designers Win New Acclaim

Horse Blanket Pins Among Latest Gadgets.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

NEW accessory gadgets must be designed and manufactured as airily and as casually as mere trifles, for hardly a shopping day dawns but the prowling shophound doesn't stand stunned in front of enough new trinkets to accent fashionable costumes by the dozens.

If you have heard whispers about new pins that are safety pins in stark infantile simplicity you will be glad to know that they are now among us . . . but, made in frankly giant size, they look exactly like horse blanket pins, to be literal.

These pins are what you use on your smartest sports clothes for town and country wear. They are dependable enough to anchor most steadfastly any sliding shirtband or belt, or you can swank around the golf links with one such pin holding down your scarf, or you wear them in the front of your town clothes as a new and different idea of chest decoration. They are smartest in a silver metal.

By far the noisiest bracelets to arrive are the famous French triplets . . . three inseparable metal wristlets of bronze and silver metal, welded interlaced with one another. They are large and bulky and probably the world's most clattering, clanking trio, but, nevertheless, they are tremendously effective and swanky for the boldly colored new sports clothes and dark wool dresses and ensembles.

If you are tired of the old style Ascot scarfs you will cheer for the new slip-noose scarfs of velvet, novelty knit, weaves and other new fabrics. They are fashioned like they sound . . . a loop at the folded end of the scarf is used to hold the two loose ends, enabling you to adjust the folds of the scarf, high or low around your throat line.

Handkerchief collectors will chuckle with appreciative pleasure over the new "wet" hankies. They come in all colors and are screaming with pertinent designs for the cause of the wets. One has decorated four corners, printed roosters with resplendent tails, well bottled bars and all the rest of the kindred reminders of a liquid era. Good luck 'kerchiefs are sprinkled with printed designs of four leaf clovers, horseshoes and a pair of rabbit's feet. These ought to bring any one luck as well as color contrast for a frock or suit.

If you are tall and slim and blessed with a long swanlike neck and slender wrists you might try out the new pierrot collar and cuff sets of double fluted silk moire ribbon. If you decide that you are one of the lucky persons that can wear them without looking like a masquerade clown then you will have something new for the plainest and most severe wool frock in your wardrobe. They are available in white, beige, madonna blue, cherry red, and black.

Most of the newest gloves are, because of the season, only available in black and brown, but they are positively the best looking gloves that have ever entered the shops . . . and how they are decorated, with stitchings, flared cuffs with insets of shirred velvet, triangles of braided designs, pipings of silver and gold scalloped edges outlined in white or beige and black and combinations that will be sold almost as soon as they reach the display case.

New velvet gloves are in, but the next few weeks will bring many more of these unusual and interesting afternoon costume glove accents or contrasts.

Yes, Men Admire Neat Hairdress, Say Four Chaps

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

They prefer 'em neat—the men do!

Mark well that word, NEAT, girls, when you're planning your attack on the boy friends. Listen to this from "Bob," "Harry," "Len," and "Dick":

"Dear Miss Donnelly: Maybe we're butting in where it's none of our business, BUT—

"Will you please tell us why the girls insist upon wearing their hair in that queer looking mangy and certainly not good looking roll at the back of their necks?

"There are about seventy girls working for the same concern we do. About three years ago most of these girls wore either mannish bobs or boyish or some kind of bob. Although then they surely used to comb their hair more often than seemed necessary, still the general appearance was neat. But now with that hair supposedly curling in the back [which it does not do] and their hands constantly straying to the back of their heads to put the curl and straggling ends in place, the femmes do present an awful appearance—let alone an untidy one.

"Do us the favor and advise the girls to trim their hair so people who have to associate with them continually are not harassed with the urge to take a pair of scissors and cut the whole mess off. Either the short bob, say we, or the long hair pinned in place. Yours for neatness,

"BOB, HARRY, LEN, AND DICK."

Enough said, eh, girls? It may be your Bob, your Harry, Len, or Dick who hasn't the courage to say to your face what is on his mind about what he rightly calls a messy, untidy looking hairdress.

If you can't have a permanent, can't afford to keep that hair set in orderly arrangement at the back of the neck, have it bobbed or let it grow until it can be pinned in one neat knob. Beside making you appear neater in the boys' eyes, it will make you better looking in every one else's eyes.

The untidy neckline never did a kind thing to a girl or woman. Besides, it's passé now to have the neckline cluttered with hair.

Freshmen at N. U. Are Urged to Try to Educate Selves

Freshmen at Northwestern university yesterday were urged to use their own initiative and not to look to their professors for their education, by Dean Addison Hibbard of the college of liberal arts, speaking at the formal convocation for freshmen in the First Methodist church in Evanston.

"Education is something like a smallpox vaccination," Dean Hibbard said, "it is not effective until it 'takes' and brings about a reaction from within. A great number of those who are graduated each June, machine-like, have finished their college work never once knowing what it was all about, never once becoming actually and intelligently alive.

"Enthusiasm for learning is supposed to mark the grind, the intellectual snob, the highbrow. I know nowhere in life where Americans are so anxious to drive poor bargains as in college. If enthusiasm is desirable in the college side shows, in social and athletic activities, why not in the big tent—the intellectual life you ostensibly came here to follow.

"In every college in the country," he said, "there are easy cynics and quick nihilists. They are a small but a vociferous and pestiferous minority. They exchange integrity and honest curiosity quickly for certain notoriety."

Classes at Northwestern begin next Monday.

Good Morning!

"Back Street" asks you to understand and pity the "other woman," who might have been the Only Woman had life given her a break.

This picture, adapted from Fannie Hurst's novel is a sincere and touching one. It eschews the maudlin and, through the beautiful acting of its players, makes completely comprehensible one Ray Schmidt, who lived out her days in the "back street" of a married man's life.

Not for me to enlarge on but for you to see Irene Dunne's delicate handling of a difficult rôle. She is an exquisite creature and her portrayal of the sad and lovely heroine is richly intelligent and rarely appealing.

John Boles brings good looks, sympathetic interpretation and a delightful speaking voice to his depiction of Saxel. You want to be furious with Saxel for a number of reasons—but Mr. Boles will not permit it. He makes too real his character's yearning need of the woman you feel he wrongs.

Supporting players are expert and the picture was in able directorial hands. The ending differs from the author's in incident, but is faithful to her conception here, as in other places where changes have been rung on the original.

Staging and the costumes and customs of the nineties, which is the period when Ray and Walter meet, are pleasing and authoritative. Dialogue is trenchant. I did think that the slang used in the early scenes was a bit advanced for that day. Did they say "swell" and "believe it or not" then? Maybe they did.

An admirable, an engrossing movie. "Back Street"! And a great sales talk for wedding rings.

See you tomorrow.

HappyBachelor Asks the Reason for Marrying

Says He's Contented to Be Single.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Since your pet theme is marriage, will you, if possible, give me one good reason why a single man with an income of $125 per week, living at good hotels and clubs and perfectly happy, should give marriage even a thought?"

Well, here's one fairly good reason. Statistics prove that married men live longer than unmarried ones. But maybe you're not interested in longevity. Probably not!

So, here's another: Married men are notoriously more successful in business. There are more of them, of course, among the middle aged men of affairs. But the stabilizing influence of home and children to look after has been proven by experts to goad men on to bigger and bigger things. There is a prejudice in business circles, if you haven't noticed it yet, "Wyly," in favor of the married man. Responsibility seems better to belong with him.

Then, there is the good old reason utilized by so many of our crooners that "somebody cares!" When you're young and going strong that doesn't strike home very forcibly. So long as you have $125 a week you can be kidded into believing every girl you spend on cares. But if there is anything much more desolate looking than a no longer young, unmarried woman about whom nobody gives a hang, it is a male counterpart of her. With the odds of public criticism in favor of the woman. At least, the man didn't have to wait to be asked!

Bachelors who can afford hotels and clubs and to be surrounded with friends, if you notice as they get older, have to spend more and more money on said friends to keep them around. The married man isn't victimized with a lot of hangers on who'd scuttle the ship at first rumble of financial breaking. He may have his own troubles—the married one—but at least he's made a try at responsible and respected citizenship.

And a powerful number of them wouldn't exchange their experiences for a $125 a week bachelor life for all the trials and tribulations marriage may have brought them. But, why not ask one of the contented married men you know for one good reason? And watch him point to Maw and the kids.

Evanston Outdoor Art Exhibit Goes Off Gold Standard

The Evanston outdoor art exhibit, where artists living on the north shore are offering their paintings for sale in Grey park, at Main and Ridge streets, Evanston, has gone off the gold standard. Paul von Klieben, director, announced that hereafter the artists will barter their paintings for articles which they need. He posted a list of such articles.

Articles listed were art supplies, a puppy, paint, an electric refrigerator, shoes and clothing, a newspaper subscription, jewelry, dental work, an automobile, radios, a corset, gasoline, rent, a typewriter, movie tickets, dry cleaning, and a vacuum cleaner.

Cash sales have totaled $4,000.

Society Must Rush to Attend Events Today

Debutantes Enjoy a Busy Fall Season.

BY JUDITH CASS.

THESE beautiful autumn Saturdays certainly are busy ones for any one who tries to do all the things that fill the social calendar, but almost every one enjoys rushing occasionally, especially when the rushing means going from one lovely party to another. The debutantes adore it, of course, and they never have such a good time as when their days are so chockful of engagements that it doesn't seem possible that they could keep them all.

Five young girls are making their formal bows to society this afternoon, Miss Mary Senior in Lake Forest, Miss Eleanor Cheney in Winnetka, and Miss Janet Bard and the Misses Barbara and Caroline Bullard in Highland Park.

Miss Senior will receive with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawson Senior, and her grandmother, Mrs. William F. Cowham, on the terrace of the house in Lake Forest the Seniors have occupied for the summer, and assisting will be Miss Jean Gordon of Boston, who is the Seniors' house guest, and seventeen of the season's buds.

Miss Senior and Miss Gordon were classmates at the Concord academy, from which they were graduated last June. Miss Senior is planning to remain at home this year to enjoy the debutante activities and to enter Vassar next fall.

Miss Cheney and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Goddard Cheney, and her grandmother, Mrs. Horance K. Tenney, will receive at Mrs. Tenney's residence, 640 Pine street, which is just next door to the Cheneys' residence.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Cheney are giving a dinner at their residence for their daughter and her assistants, and later the party will go to the Indian Hill club for dancing. Miss Senior and her assistants will be in this party. Miss Cheney is returning to Bryn Mawr for her sophomore year next month.

Debut Party at Exmoor Club.

Miss Bard, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph A. Bard, and the Misses Bullard, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Sellar Bullard, will greet their parents' and their own friends at a tea at the Exmoor Country club. They will have a number of "debs" assisting, and tonight the debutantes and their escorts will dine and dance at the club. Miss Bard and Barbara Bullard spent last winter together at school in Paris and they plan to be at home this winter, but Miss Caroline Bullard leaves tomorrow for her junior year at Wells college.

Invitations have been received for the wedding of Miss Helen Rend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Rend of 70 Scott street, to John Vaughan Clarke III., son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bertram Clarke of Pasadena, on Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 4, at 4:30 o'clock, at the Holy Name cathedral. The wedding will be small, and after it there will be a small reception at the Casino.

One of the largest of the autumn weddings on the north shore will take place in Evanston this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock at St. Luke's church, Bishop George Craig Stewart officiating. Miss Myra Standish Colburn is the bride and Allen Thorndyke Perry of Cleveland the bridegroom. After the ceremony there will be a small reception at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Colburn.

Sheridan Horse Show Opens.

Fort Sheridan's new show ring and grand stand built high on a bluff overlooking Lake Michigan was a colorful scene yesterday afternoon as society gathered for the opening of the seventh annual Fort Sheridan horse show. The weather was ideal.

On the roads leading to the arena pennants and flags fluttered gayly. The Fort Sheridan band played while the visitors were arriving and during the program. There was a good deal of admiring applause for the riders, especially for Miss Libby Chase, Mrs. William R. Odell Jr., who rode, and Miss Narcissa Thorne, who brought her dog, Jimmie, along. There weren't very many spills, although Miss Veronese Beatty took a hard one riding a horse for Thomas R. Chalmers.

Almost every one turned out in fall sports ensembles. The boxes were partially filled for the afternoon events, but the evening show brought added horse show enthusiasts who were compelled to be in town during the day.

Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin was in a trim black and white costume with her children, Barbara and Billy, who scampered down from the box to help their collie dog collect coins for Orphans of the Storm.

In Maj. Gen. Frank Parker's box were Mrs. Parker, Col. and Mrs. Henry Clark, Miss Cynthia Cooke and her father, Henry C. Cooke; Miss Ann Parker, wearing a brown wool crêpe dress and matching turban; Miss Virginia Melody in a blue and white knitted suit, and Mrs. George Stanley Smith.

Mrs. Robert R. McCormick had as guests in her box Mrs. Arthur Small, Edmond Prendergast, Miss Anne Bryant, and Miss Jane and "Sonny" Ripley.

The navy was represented by Admiral Wat T. Cluverius and members of his staff.

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos C. Daughaday had as their guests "Jackie" Anderson, Nancy Blaine, and Ellen Bull. In Mrs. Fred A. Poor's box were Mr. and Mrs. Winn Canfield and Mrs. Lawrence Jones of London.

In the William E. Lloyd box were Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Irving Knudson, Mrs. F. R. Lowrey, Mrs. P. L. Sutherland, Mrs. Landon Hoyt Jr., and Mrs. William M. Hoyt.

Among others noted were Mrs. Allan S. MacGillivray of Louisville,

The Murder of Caroline Bundy

By ALICE CAMPBELL.

SYNOPSIS.

Neil Starkey, American biographer, is engaged by Caroline Bundy to compile the life and letters of her late father, a famous English biologist. Neil is mystified by the peculiarities of Miss Bundy, who is broken in health and in great mental distress. She has hired a photographer, named Tilbury, as bailiff, and he and his wife, a common, illiterate couple, occupy the lodge. Neil meets Natasha Andreyev, Caroline's half Russian niece, beautiful, but fiery tempered. He moves to the Bundy estate in Somerset, and Caroline puts him in charge of the library in the daytime, cautioning him not to admit any one. She tells him her father, a man of science, was also a mystic.

INSTALLMENT VI.

INQUISITIVENESS.

Neil turned to see the Russian girl coming in at the gates, the two Alsatians leaping about her. The bailiff's wife accosted her importantly.

"O, Miss, will you be so good as to 'ave our flues looked at? Shocking state they're in. I'm all of a muck with soot."

Miss Bundy's niece paused, glanced at the speaker, then at Neil, the merest flicker of the lashes. Her voice when she answered was cold.

"Very well. I'll see to it."

She walked on, her head held high. Neil overtook her in the shadow of the rhododendrons. They paced on side by side for several seconds before she addressed him to ask if his room was all right and if he had what he wanted.

"Everything," he assured her. "I hope I'm not going to be a bother to you."

"It's no bother at all," she returned indifferently. "Only as it's my job to see to these things I like to know if you're comfortable."

This ended the conversation, for at the front door she deserted him, keeping to the path which led around the house. Slightly damped he wondered if she had conceived for him a genuine dislike or if she was merely embarrassed over yesterday's occurrence. As to her sentiments towards the denizens of the lodge there could be no doubt.

"Why, how did you get here?" inquired Neil blankly.

Hearing voices in the drawing room he entered the library beyond and picked up the day's newspaper, but the doors between were half open, and almost at once he found himself listening to the querulous tones of his hostess, at that moment saying to an invisible companion: "I can't in the least account for it, unless it is this racking uncertainty which is preying on me. Why, I've never had these palpitations before — never in my life! I can't sleep and my heart behaves very queerly. Worry, that's what it is. I simply daren't do anything till I can get some absolute proof. If I'm not careful I shall turn myself into a laughing stock for all the neighborhood."

"You, a laughing stock?" exclaimed a man's mild accents, which Neil immediately recognized as the bailiff's. "Why, 'ow could any one find fault with a lady like yourself? For the matter of that, wot's the hurry?"

"Only that we may go on like this for months, not getting any nearer—and it's of vital importance to—to my father's reputation that I should make sure."

There was a pause, broken by a rather sulky voice. "O, well, it's not me that's anxious to keep on with it. Just say the word and we'll call the whole business off."

"No, no, don't misunderstand me," cried the old lady in evident alarm. "Please don't imagine I want to give it up now."

"In a manner of speaking, it's a waste of time for me," continued the man in an aggrieved strain. "Wot about my profession wot I've spent years on? Connie was at me only this morning over letting that place at Cookham slip through my fingers. Like me, she's soft hearted, but all the same we've our future to think of."

"If you sacrifice yourself in my interests," declared Miss Bundy in a trembling tone, "I promise you shan't lose by it."

"Well, no one could speak fairer than that," replied the other, mollified but still doubtful. "We'll go on for a bit, then, and 'ope for better luck. But there, now—here's your little drop of medicine ready waiting and you're about to forget it. Shall I pour it out for you?"

The uncouth figure passed in front of Neil's line of vision and bent over to measure something into a glass. Two inches of standing collar and an obtrusive brass stud showed above the ill fitting coat as its owner murmured soothingly, "Wot you want to do is to take it easylike. Save yourself, think of nothing at all, and come to it fresh. May make all the difference."

Come to what fresh? Neil was still asking himself what this cryptic discussion meant when the gong sounded, nor did Miss Bundy's haggard and worn face at the table help him to a solution. Strange to say, his hostess ate with the same voracity she had displayed yesterday at tea, a fact which appeared to puzzle her niece as well as himself, for several times he caught the girl looking across at the older woman with a slight frown. An enormous appetite, yet steady loss of weight. That in itself was odd. There was little talk and the atmosphere again was decidedly strained. At the end of the meal Miss Andreyev spoke reluctantly to her aunt.

"You are going to lie down, aren't you? Dr. Graves said you must rest for two hours."

"Two hours! What nonsense!" Miss Bundy chafed visibly, but with a sigh gave in. "Well, if I must, I must—but don't forget to telephone Parkins to see to the lodge stove. If it's not attended to at once I shall take my repairs elsewhere."

Neil went back to his work. The house was quiet, there was nothing to disturb him. It must have been an hour later that, standing on the library steps to examine a volume from the upper shelves, he became aware of a draught blowing in on his legs and heard just behind him a dry cough.

Some one had come in and left the door open. Looking around he saw on the other side of the big table the insignificant features and fixed, glassy stare of the bailiff, Tilbury.

"Why, how did you get here?" inquired Neil blankly, still perplexed over not having heard any one enter.

The man coughed again apologetically. "Beg pardon, sir; I do 'ope you'll excuse me barging in like this. I did knock, but as there was no answer I just ventured to come inside. It's my fountain pen I lost in here last night. Would it trouble you very much if I was to 'unt for it?"

"Not at all—only close the door, will you? The papers are blowing."

"O, I'm sorry, sir! No, don't come down. I'll put it all tidy."

While Neil went on with his reading quiet movements proceeded behind him, the gentle shifting of furniture and the rattle of the wastebasket. Presently a low cry of triumph recalled the visitor's errand. The pen had been found under the fender, but instead of taking an immediate departure its owner hung about, politely solicitous.

"Work going nicely, is it?" he asked, letting his pale eyes roam over the book shelves with vacant wonderment. "Finding all you want, I 'ope?"

When Neil replied in the affirmative he went on conversationally: "Seems as 'ow this Mr. Bundy—or was it Dr. Bundy, sir?—was a big man in his line. Can't say as I know just wot his line was. Pardon me asking—but wot did he do?"

"Science. He was a noted biologist."

"Ow, was he now!" The eyes protruded with awe. "Wrote books, I suppose. That one of 'is you've got in your 'and?"

"This," answered Neil, showing the volume, "happens to be his earliest work, now out of print, and known only to a few specialists. It was withdrawn from circulation fifty years ago."

"You don't s'y! Why was that, now?"

"Because of its anti-religious tendency. The author repudiated the views held at that period and did his best to erase the impression he had made. Except in his extreme youth, Bundy was deeply devout."

That Tilbury could be interested in Theodore Bundy's tenets of faith was manifestly absurd, but at all events he was pretending to be. The man could not digest what was being said, yet he seemed a veritable human sponge, soaking up information. The questions he asked were naive, betraying utter ignorance, nor could Neil imagine where they were leading. Minutes ticked by, and altogether a quarter of an hour had passed before the man glanced at the clock, apologizing once more for his intrusion, and humbly withdrew.

Left alone Neil speculated afresh on Tilbury's connection with Caroline Bundy. Judging from the talk overheard that morning he was conducting some experiment with her, but whatever its nature it could hardly call for any intellectual ability. How he or his wife could be indispensable to any project was a mystery, and yet there was no doubt that Miss Bundy was overwhelmingly anxious to keep them with her.

The batch of correspondence Neil had been examining was neatly restacked on the table, but when he came to run through it the final page of a letter was missing. Had it been here before? He could not be sure. In any case it was unimportant, merely an acceptance to a breakfast invitation from a colleague. After assiduous search he dismissed it from his mind and locked the other letters in their file.

Children to Ride Today.

This is a red letter day in the lives of the children who are to ride this morning in the children's horse show at Fort Sheridan, and I'll wager most of them didn't sleep much last night because of excitement, or that those who did dreamed about the joy of having ribbons pinned on Puddle Duck or Silver Tail or Peanuts or Popcorn or Peter Piper or whatever the name of the pony of the young dreamer may be.

Puddle Duck is Helen Niblack's pony, and Helen, you know, belongs to a family accustomed to taking home ribbons from horse shows, for she is the daughter of the Austin Niblacks.

Richard Chatfield-Taylor is Silver Tail's owner, and Peanuts is Florence Forgan's pony. Young Master Phelps Swift owns Popcorn, and Jacqueline Brundage is the proud owner of Peter Piper. These are only a few of the many children who will ride in one or more of the seven classes arranged by Miss Libby Chase for the show.

The north shore children are not the only ones who are excited over appearing in a horse show this week end, for out west in Geneva there is a group of youngsters who have thought of nothing else practically for weeks but of riding in the Dunham Woods Riding club's show at Wayne tomorrow afternoon.

The children are those who keep their ponies and horses in the stables on the meadows near Joy Morton II.'s and Perry Dryden's places, and although they are to appear in only one class at tomorrow's show, I'm sure the ambitious young equestrians and equestrienes think they are to be the "whole show," as they will be to their proud parents, no doubt.

But there are to be other classes in the show, with entries from various parts of the surrounding country, including Wheaton, Lake Forest and Barrington.

Tea Will Open New Residence.

Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed will have a tea party in her new residence in Lake Forest, a sort of house warming for the beautiful new English house into which she and her daughter, Mary, and son, John, moved late this summer. The house is most formal appearing, at least from the outside, but the party tomorrow is to be most informal, just a sort of neighborly affair. Miss Reed is not to make a formal debut this fall after all, but will have a dinner-dance during the holidays.

The Kenneth Curtises are giving a buffet supper tomorrow night at their residence in Winnetka for Mr. Curtis' mother, Mrs. A. D. Curtis, who is here from Beverly Hills, Cal., visiting them and her other son and his wife, the Darwin Curtises, who also live in Winnetka.

Simpsons to Return Tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson and their sons, William and John, and A. Watson Armour III. are expected to arrive in the city tonight from abroad. John Simpson and young Mr. Armour joined the Simpsons in Scotland for the grouse shooting season after an extended hunting trip to Africa and India.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry N. Rowlay of Lake Forest, who were the parents of two boys, are being congratulated upon the birth of a daughter on Wednesday at the Alice Home hospital in Lake Forest.

Miss Nora McCurdy is spending two weeks with her uncle, Owen B. Jones, and Mrs. Jones, in Lake Forest, on her way east from her home in California to Bryn Mawr.

Mrs. Honoré Palmer and her son's wife, Mrs. d'Orsay Palmer, sailed yesterday for a two months' stay in Paris. Honoré Palmer, who saw them off, has gone to the Virginia Hot Springs for a fortnight's visit.

Miss Mary Louise Morris wore white net embroidered in gold yesterday when she made her formal bow to society at a tea given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Thomas Morris, at their residence in Winnetka. The dress had mink around the neck, puffed sleeves and a gold brown girdle. She carried yellow orchids with lavender tips. She changed into a lovely gown of white satin for the dinner dance given for her by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Reeble, at their Winnetka residence last night, and her flowers for that occasion were purple orchids. Miss Morris is leaving shortly to enter the Sarah Lawrence college at Bronxville, N. Y.

GASOLINE ALLEY—WHAT TO DO?

SO YOU COULDN'T KEEP UP WITH LORA, SQUINT.
NO, WALT, SHE SLIPPED OVER TOO MANY FAST ONES. WOMEN HAVE CHANGED SINCE I WAS THAT AGE.
OH, WELL, I GUESS LORA AND PRIGGY ARE ABOUT WHERE THEY WERE WHEN I LEFT.
THEY'VE BEEN IN CONFERENCE ENOUGH. THEY OUGHT TO HAVE ARRIVED AT SOME CONCLUSIONS.
YOU DON'T THINK THEY ARE REALLY CONSIDERING GETTING MARRIED?
WELL I WOULDN'T PUT IT PAST 'EM.
WHY THAT'S ABSURD, SQUINT. WHAT COULD THAT GASOLINE LIZARD DO TO SUPPORT A WIFE?
HE PROBABLY THINKS YOU COULD SUPPORT THE PAIR OF 'EM AS CHEAPLY AS ONE.

Special Class No Detriment to Leadership

Child Progresses in His Own Way.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Don't you like to be able to defend an idea that you believe in? People who are against things are usually well armed with argument, but sometimes when we find ourselves in favor of something we are dismayed because we have no ammunition. Are you ever like that in a discussion?

Those parents and school people who believe in creating special classes for gifted children would probably like to be able to answer the objection we are going to quote today. We have from time to time listed all the other objections to special classes and this is the last:

Special classes destroy leadership, say many. If a gifted child is left in with average children, they say, he will become a leader. But if he's put into a class with twenty-four others who are as bright as he, only one can be the leader and so the other twenty-four gifted children will be lost as leader material.

Now, feeling myself that the leadership idea in education is greatly overdone, I take real pleasure in quoting part of the answer as given by the White House conference committee on special education:

"There are leaders of men and there are men who are leaders in their special line." Leadership, you see, can be of more than one kind.

"The brighter child in the regular grade is not usually a leader. He leads in his studies, but for that reason is sometimes unpopular and anything but a leader of his group.

"In the special class, however, each leads in his own particular line."

Experience has shown that "there is no interference with the development of leadership in special classes, but, on the contrary, the process is helped." And this last I would like to underline from my own experience:

"One of the great values of this method is that the children learn to respect and be proud of the abilities of their fellows—each in his own line." It is a delight to hear boys and girls tell you how swell Jean's drawings are, or how fast Bill can do his algebra problems—something which I hear again and again.

Wool Jersey Suit with Green Striped Jacket from Tao Tai for Tennis Minded

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—If you are one who goes in for the great outdoors in a big way you will be interested in the sports house of Tao Tai. Famous along the Riviera for its sports clothes, it has just opened a salon in Paris. Spectator clothes have come to monopolize so much of the sports picture that active ones have been thrust to the background by many of the couturiers. But no one knows better than Tao Tai how to make active sports clothes practical and attractive.

For the first cool days of autumn Tao Tai has designed a tennis suit, sketched today, that would drive anybody to take up the racquet. The jacket sweater is knitted in green and white diagonal stripes that alternate wavy with straight. Waist length, it ends in two vest like points in front, and has loops along the edge in back that slip through the green belt worn on the dress. This belt has a metal buckle in the center and is held in place at the side by crocheted loops. The sweater has a rounded collar, short sleeves, and it buttons down the center front on metal buttons.

The frock is closely knitted in supple white wool jersey. It is ribbed vertically from the shoulders to the hips, where it is released and falls into a moderately full skirt, allowing freedom of movement. The neck is rounded in front and has a deep U in back. The back of this frock is shown in the small sketch.

Statue of Lincoln as Young Man Is Unveiled

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The statue-story of Abraham Lincoln was completed today with the unveiling here of a gigantic bronze figure representing the emancipator as a 21 year old Indiana frontiersman. Most other statues depict the martyred President as a troubled man, aged beyond years, with face furrowed. This shows Lincoln as he looked on life eagerly, face unlined, strength apparent and confidence unlimited. He leans against an oak stump, ax at side, with a book in one hand and the other resting lightly on the head of a hound. The statue is the work of Paul Manship, New York sculptor, who worked on it four years.

Zonta to Seek Ways to Help Jobless Women

Women executives from many points of the compass, gathered in conference at the Edgewater Beach hotel as members of Zonta Club International, will turn their attention today to plans for helping their jobless colleagues through the winter and to plans for aiding the return of prosperity. The two day meeting, which started yesterday, will close tonight with a dinner.

Routine business occupied the sessions of yesterday. Mrs. Katherine Maddux of Chicago, president, presided. Mrs. Maddux is a packing executive and associate editor of the National Provisioner, a trade journal.

Zonta, which is comprised of woman who own their own businesses or who act as department heads, will be active in the women's congress planned for the Century of Progress, according to the secretary, Miss Harriet C. Richards.

Not only the business woman who is out of work, but the girl who is just finishing school and who contemplates a career in business or the professions will be the subject of deliberations at today's meeting, at which a "service program" will be discussed.

Did the cake fall . . . the pie boil over . . . the candy turn to sugar, or the frosting run away? Is there a recipe you've dreamed of since childhood and would give worlds to have again? Is there a food subject you'd like to see discussed or a suggestion you hanker to make? Saturday is open forum for questions and suggestions. So here's for hearing from you!

First from Mrs. A. E. A. who writes: "Several years ago we had at a Paris hotel Irish potato puffs which were delicious. I later found the recipe, but could not make it work. The slices are supposed to be like Saratoga chips but puffed instead of flat. Could you help me?"

Yes, those potato puffs, sometimes called souffles, are delicious. They're simple to make and will turn out fluffy if this method is carried out.

POTATO PUFFS.

Slice peeled potatoes very thin and soak the slices in water and ice until thoroughly chilled. Place in a wire basket and plunge into deep fat [500 degrees F.] for fifteen seconds. Remove and cool. Return to the fat, which has cooled to 375 degrees F., and fry till puffed and golden brown. You see, the first short frying seals the slices, retaining the moisture. After cooling, the second frying creates steam inside which expands the potato, making the puff.

Question No. 2 [Mrs. A. J. T.]: "Please send me your recipe for baking bread. I've tried it but can get only two loaves from one cake of yeast. My neighbor gets six loaves of bread and six coffee cakes from one yeast cake. How does she do that?"

Well, I'd like to meet your neighbor, Mrs. T., if she gets that many loaves of bread and cake from one lone yeast cake! But I suspect you mean she makes either bread or coffee cakes with her one yeast cake, so that isn't quite so astonishing. As a rule I find that four good full loaves are the most which can satisfactorily be made from one yeast cake. It is quite likely that your friend makes smaller loaves and would make six out of this same recipe.

The number of cakes of yeast, however, is not really the determining factor in the output, but rather the method we use and the length of time we intend to let the yeast act before baking. The less time we allow for the whole process, the more yeast there must be. Thus, it is possible for several cakes to be used and still only two loaves of bread result if the remainder of the recipe is small.

AMUSEMENTS.

CUBS INCREASE LEAD; DEFEAT PHILS, 3 TO 2

GOODMAN, SOMERVILLE REACH U. S. AMATEUR FINAL

OMAHA YOUTH BEATS OUIMET, 1931 CHAMPION

Guilford Routed by Canadian.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 16.—You may fancy the embarrassment of the genial commissars who govern the game of golf in the U. S. A. and do a reasonably good job of keeping it sweet and clean and sporting when Johnny Goodman of Omaha, Neb., this afternoon licked Francis Ouimet, 4 and 2, in the semi-final round of the national amateur championship and made an ex-champion of him.

In the other match Ross Somerville of London, Ont., the fourth British subject ever to reach the final round of the American competition, defeated Jess Guilford, 7 and 6, in a bout which Guilford, in a garrulous outburst for him, described as 'a murder; just a murder."

Third Rout of Cup Players.

The Goodman boy had been passed over in the selection of the American Walker cup team, which defeated the British amateur team a couple of weeks ago, and today in Ouimet he beat his third opponent drawn from among the membership of that team, all of whom were supposed to be better than himself.

First he eliminated Charlie Seaver, the Stanford university half back, then Maurice McCarthy, and finally, with a great crowd of patrons in attendance, he outgolfed the captain of the Walker cup boys and the official and spiritual head man of amateur golf in this country.

To the golf fans who have long memories for inconceivably trivial details of old, old tournaments this will be a famous victory. Or, more properly, it will become a dramatic and tragic defeat, for the boys shaped up in the popular imagination somewhat the same as Corbett and Sullivan did, and the uppity kid from Omaha did not win so much as dear old Francis lost.

Last Foreign Victory in 1911.

So tomorrow Johnny Goodman, who was overlooked, to put it in a nice way, but ignored, to put it more accurately, in the selection of the Walker cup team, will be the final defender of the cup which has never crossed the American border since Harold Hilton, or 'Arold 'Ilton, the Englishman, won it in 1911.

To be sure, selection for the Walker cup team is no such honor as a young golfer would be likely to mope and pine about, but the omission of Goodman from the team, in view of his past record and now in view of his subsequent performances, seems just a wee mite like something on the order of something akin to snobbery. On this account, the young athlete may have derived some special satisfaction above and beyond the normal measure from his victory over Ouimet.

Sun Replaces Clouds.

The two pairs of boys set out on their meanderings in rather cloudy, cool weather with a pretty strong blow of wind agoing to nag their shots, but by afternoon the sun was hot, the wind was waning and H. L. Mencken of Baltimore had been discredited as a goose-bone weather prophet.

Mr. Mencken had consulted his barometer and studied the ring around the moon the night before and threatened the semi-final round with a heavy dousing of rain, adding that he hadn't been wrong in years and years. Mistaken at last, it may be that Mr. Mencken has now begun to crack and this information is tossed in as extra for the fundamentalists who may derive some hope and pleasure from it.

Ouimet wore a seedy old cap yanked low over his eyes and down his thin nose and the sleeves of his sweater were rolled back a few inches, exposing the white cuffs of his shirt and his large, bony wrists. The kid, who is 22 to Ouimet's 39, played barehanded, but paused now and again after nding out to fetch a comb out of his flask pocket and run it through his brown,

Good Old Days Almost Here for Maroons

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The good old days when Stagg field was the largest stadium in the Western conference and the Maroons feared no team, may be on the way back. Like prosperity, the old days are just around the corner. At least, there seems to be a distinct stiffening of spirit this fall among Chicago alumni.

There's no tonic for a depressed alumnus like a smashing back or a couple of 200 pound linemen. And while the Maroons this year, the 41st edition of Stagg's Midway presentations, are not likely to win the Big Ten championship, an optimistic consensus predicts the best season in several years. This same optimism looks ahead.

"Better Team Next Year."

"We'll have a better eleven next year," we were told yesterday morning when we watched three varsity teams prancing through the "whirlwind" shift, Stagg's latest offensive innovation. Apparently there are pounds and pounds of freshmen material waiting for the opening game in 1933. Scholarships and new eligibility rules at Chicago may make an improvement which will bring the Maroons back to the first division.

An important reason for believing Chicago is headed for average success this fall, is the schedule, which, with the exception of Purdue and Michigan, includes teams that are rated in the second flight. The entire schedule is arranged so that five conference games conclude the season.

Maroons Will Be Weak at End.

Chicago's weakness undoubtedly will be at end. Stagg apparently intends to drill the Maroons in running plays more than formerly and for this style of attack ends, who can successfully block their opposing tackles, are essential. Pompeo Toigo, one time guard, who was shifted to end last year, is the only letterman. Warren Belstrom and Frank Thompson, 1931 reserves, will be back. Both are considered too light for an entire game.

Barton Smith, a sophomore, is expected to work in at a full time end job.

Against Monmouth Page will play full back, but it is hoped that by the time of the Yale game Cecil Storey, a powerful 192 pound sophomore full back, will be eligible. Storey comes from Long Beach, Cal., and is touted as the best line plunger since the days of Austin McCarthy. With Storey available, Page will be shifted to half back. Stagg's other backfield choices are Vincent Sahlin and Pete

Cubs Didn't Make Mistake in Naming Hartnett Gabby

[This is the third of a series of sketches of Cubs' players who will oppose the New York Yankees in the world series.]

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The Cubs can't claim the best catcher in the business, but there's one thing you can't take away from them. At least, they have the noisest, peppiest backstop of all time. Charles Leo Hartnett, better known as Gabby, is the name. The monicker was hung on him because he jabbered continually on the first training trip he ever made. He's still jabbering, and it is barely possible that he'll rise up at his own funeral for a few last words and a chuckle.

If you've heard Gabby ranting at the plate either as a means of encouraging his mates or to let an umpire know he doesn't stand so well, you haven't heard anything. What you must hear to realize Gabby's actual power as a noisemaker is one of the roars he turns loose in a hotel when somebody happens along with a funny story. Guests, resigned to an evening of quiet in a lobby chair, have been knocked right out of their seats, when Hartnett laughs. And many a time in the still of night you are awakened by a blast that is unmistakably Hartnett's appreciation of another story.

Champion Story Teller;
Seldom Finishes Yarn.

When it comes to telling stories Hartnett is a champion unchallenged. He's the only known man alive who tells stories without finishing them. He gets through most of his yarn without trouble, but just as the point is reached he laughs so hard that he doesn't finish what he was going to say. Or if he should happen to have a run of luck and get through without an outburst he shouts the last few words and nice old ladies sitting comfortably in the hotel lobby immediately pick up their knitting and head for their rooms.

Although the unofficial noisemaker of the club and self appointed greeter whenever hero worshipping fans show up in the hotels or the ball parks, Hartnett actually takes his baseball seriously. When not in a game he is as unhappy as a spanked youngster. During 1929 when his arm was dead because he couldn't resist trying to make a mid-season throw the day spring training started, he was a gold mine for the uniform man. Gabby slid up and down the bench so much that he wore out more flannel pants than all the rest of the club put together.

Arm Is Ready for Approaching World Series.

When Hartnett gets into the world series, as seems probable, he is going to feel a little better about that 1929 affair. He only participated a few times as a pinch hitter in that event, and that was about as satisfying as visiting the mint with a penny in your pocket. It wasn't possible to let him catch because of the arm he foolishly threw away for that season. He never got over being in that predicament during what he thought should have been the crowning moment of his career. But Gabby is going to have his moment now.

If there is anything Hartnett likes to do, second, of course, to the production of a base hit, it is to throw. And he really does that quite well, so well in fact that if you claim he has about the best throwing arm a catcher ever brought into baseball, it will be tough to prove otherwise.

There have been more than a few great throwing catchers. Ray Schalk was one who rated in this class, not because his throws traveled like bullets but because they were accurate. Other great catchers have had power but not the necessary amount of accuracy. Hartnett has both and probably it is a bit strange that the qualities should be retained after ten years of big leagueing by an arm that fifteen years ago was badly fractured and apparently dead four seasons ago because of Gabby's recklessness.

Oldest Member of Cubs Flock.

Hartnett now is the granddaddy of the Cubs flock. The men who were his mates on his first training trip, 1922, have all gone now. That spring he was just another rookie who made a lot of noise. He hadn't been much above the average as a minor leaguer, but Scout Jack Doyle picked him up as a prospect.

Gabby didn't have long to wait for his chance. The spring exhibition series was just getting under way when it became necessary to make use of the peppery young man. He hadn't been in the game long before Bill Killefer, then manager and a pretty fair catcher himself in his day, delivered a prediction.

"There's a great catcher," declared Killefer, right out loud. And Gabby made the prediction stand up.

Sarada	117	Pete Walls	12-1
Fingal	122	Laverne Fator	15-1
Kerry Patch	122	Earl Sande	20-1

New York, Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Fourteen two year olds are named to run tomorrow in the 43d Futurity over the Widener course at Belmont Park. They are the surviving eligibles representing 2,026 mares nominated in 1929.

The horses in this spectacle, the richest turf prize in the world, were unborn when their mothers-to-be were nominated. Of those two year olds which were born a year later, in 1930, fourteen will be probable starters, in which case the stake will gross approximately $109,500. The share to the winner will be close to $97,000 net. The extra starting fee tomorrow will be $1,000. The Westchester Racing association adds $25,000 to the purse.

Ladysman Has Bright Record.

While in many respects several of the probable field have a chance for the Futurity stake, it appears that W. R. Coe's Ladysman will be the favorite. He recently won the $50,000 Flopeful and several stakes in the west. He scored other notable victories at Saratoga.

The Belair stud's Happy Gal, which was beating all the young colts and fillies in the east when Ladysman quit the west and came back to Saratoga, and E. R. Bradley's Barn Swallow, which has been improving right along, are leading contenders. Barn Swallow won the Matron and the Tomboy stakes in quick succession at Belmont Park.

Fillies Prominent Winners.

Both the last two named are fillies, and fillies have always played a prominent part in Futurities. Top Flight won it last year. Anita Peabody won it three years ago, and before that Mother Goose was the victor.

Cubs Can Finish at .500 Pace and Win That Pennant

The Cubs from now on can maintain a pace of approximately .500 and still clinch the National league pennant. By defeating the Phillies yesterday while the Pirates were idle the Chicago team increased its lead to six full games over the second place Pittsburgh club and now has only nine games left to play, as against eleven for the Pirates.

If the Cubs win only five of those nine they are sure of winning, even if the Pirates win eleven. The standing then would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Chicago	91	63	.591
Pittsburgh	90	64	.584

If the Cubs win only three of their nine, they still could finish in first place, unless Pittsburgh won 10 out of 11. Even then the Pirates could only tie the Cubs, needing a clean sweep of their eleven games to finish ahead of Chicago. If the Cubs win four out of nine, the best the Pirates can get is a tie by winning all eleven games.

Combs Began Career Under Joe McCarthy

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 16.—The Yankees will show you a ball player in the outer reaches of the park who comes from the Sergt. York country, a sort of side-hill dodger of the Kentucky mountains, and who set out to be a school teacher but changed his mind.

There are a couple of reasons why Earl Combs changed his mind about teaching. One was that a bush league manager named Joe McCarthy hired him to play ball for him in the large city of Louisville on the strength of a tri-county reputation which the young man had made at the age of 20, playing for a freshwater college at Richmond, Ky. Combs was fixing to be a teacher at Eastern Kentucky Normal college when Mr. McCarthy decided that he had to have him for his very own.

Feeling that way about Combs, Mr. McCarthy offered him much more money than the boy could hope to earn teaching his neighbors' children to read and write. So Combs decided to forego his career with the hickory stick.

That reason suffices for the case and the other one does not really arise but this is it:

They do allege that down in the region where he was intending to teach the children to read and write, the neighbors have little faith in such fancy work as reading and writing. If a body has anything to say, let a body say it, instead of writing it down on paper like a puzzle. And if the repartee ever goes to a point where the spoken language is no longer adequate, then let a body get down the squirrel rifle and say it that way. Not mess around with a lot of scribbling.

So McCarthy Took
$50,000 for Combs.

Anyway, Earl Combs quit fixing to teach reading and writing and joined up with the Louisville ball club under this McCarthy, the bush league manager who sold him to the Yankees for $50,000 and a heavy hitting outfielder one year later. The price was the highest ever received for an American association player, but as events have turned out since the spring of 1924, when the sale was made, the boy was a bargain nevertheless.

The heavy hitting outfielder sent down to Louisville in part payment for the side-hill dodger was Elmer Smith, the same who had hit a home run with the bases full to beat the Robins in the Cleveland-Brooklyn world series of 1920. He had been hitting almost .500 as a pinch hitter when the Yankees tossed him in as a bonus in the purchase of Combs, which indicates how much they must have expected from their new employé.

The first thing Combs did for Mr. McCarthy on his arrival in Louisville was to stand spread-legged like a croquet wicket in the outfield, too scared to move, as a ball slid through him to the fence for a triple. After the inning was over he was afraid to come in to the bench, but McCarthy walked a little way out and

TINNING GETS 5TH TRIUMPH, 2D HIT OF SEASON

Hartnett Smacks Homer No. 12.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 16.—The Cubs this afternoon increased their lead over the idle Pittsburgh Pirates to six games, when they took a 3 to 2 decision from the Phillies in a high class game of baseball, although they were outhit, nine to seven.

Gabby Hartnett and Bud Tinning, the Chicago battery, were the big shots in both the offensive and defensive phases of the league leaders' endeavors. The first run of the contest was Hartnett's 12th homer of the year and his fifth in eight days. Tinning followed in the same inning—the third—with his second hit as a major leaguer, an immense double, after which he scored on a single by Woody English. From the third inning to the eighth Ed Holley, once a Cub, held the Chicagoans hitless, but in that eighth Herman singled, went to second on an error by Klein, and scored on Cuyler's single to center to effect what turned out to be the winning run.

Play Despite Rain.

The game was played despite a heavy rain, which fell throughout the morning and caused other National league games to be postponed. Calling off today's encounter, however, would have meant curtailment of both clubs' schedules, since the Cubs will wind up their 1932 eastern affairs in a double header tomorrow and move on to Cincinnati for a game Sunday, while the Pirates and Cardinals remain in the east through Sunday.

The victory was the fifteenth the Cubs have taken from the fourth place Phillies in 20 played this year, and put the league leaders one game above the .500 quota they set for the eastern trip now nearing its end. The boys now have to win five of their remaining nine games to clinch the pennant, even if the Pirates win all their remaining eleven games. The Pirates, incidentally, now face three double headers as compared with two for the Cubs. One of these double bills will be between the Cubs and Pirates at Wrigley field on Sept. 20.

No. 5 for Tinning.

Today's victory was the fifth of the year for Tinning and his fourth since Grimm assumed the Cub management here just six weeks ago. After walking the first two batsmen on nine pitches Bud didn't walk another man, and was invincible in the pinches, except in the fifth and ninth innings. In the fifth Bartell doubled with two out and scored on Klein's second single, and in the ninth Heathcote doubled with one down and scored on G. Davis' single.

Then Tinning bore down and made Bartell fly to Stephenson, after which Klein came up to shoot for his No. 38 homer, which would have won the ball game. But instead of knocking the ball over his beloved right field fence, Chuck tapped to Herman, who ended the contest by tossing to Koenig to force G. Davis.

There was a lot of activity in the first inning, considering that no runs were accomplished. In the Chicago half Herman led off with a single along the right field foul line, but was out, Klein to Bartell, when he tried to stretch it to a double. English and Cuyler supplied easy infield outs.

Bud Bears Down.

Tinning had to do much bearing down after a bad start to hold the enemy in the Philly first. G. Davis walked on five pitches and Bartell walked on four pitches. Klein flied to Moore. The bases were full when G. Davis and Bartell were content to advance a base each on Hurst's single to right. Whitney popped to Koenig in short center and Lee, after running the count to three balls and two strikes, flied to Stephenson.

Hartnett opened the third with that No. 12 homer, a high one over the right field fence. Mallon threw out Koenig, but Tinning then doubled to left center. Bartell threw out Herman. English singled to center, scoring Tinning. Cuyler beat out a single to Whitney and English stopped at second. Mallon threw out Stephenson.

Klein and Hurst fattened up their sizeable batting averages in the third, but the enterprise produced no serious threat. Klein singled to right with

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox and Yankees, newly crowned league champions, wound up their season's business yesterday in speedy fashion, but without much benefit to the former. The title holders kept their bats in midseason form by launching one decisive attack against their old pal, Sam Jones, and this proved ample for their 17th triumph in the 22 games with the south siders since the campaign started. The count was 4 to 1, and it was made in one hour and thirty-four minutes.

The Sox attack, or rather the lack of one, was instrumental in concluding the party so quickly. In six of the nine innings they dropped in one, two, three order before the combined efforts of Wilcy Moore, of sinker ball fame, and the bespectacled Danny MacFayden. In one inning they broke the monotony with a base on balls. In another, the fourth, they hopped on Moore for four hits and their only run. After this no pale hose saw base until MacFayden, who labored the three concluding innings, loosened up to the extent of a single in the ninth.

Jones Suffers in Third.

Things didn't move any too smoothly for Jones in the first two innings, so the uprising against him in the third, when three scored, wasn't much of a surprise. Sewell started it with a double to left and scored on a similar hit by Chapman. Gehrig bunted, and the tap was so well placed that he beat Kress' throw for a hit, putting Chapman on third. Byrd sent a real single into left to score Chapman and Gehrig ran home on Hoag's two bagger in the same direction.

The first hit accomplished by the Sox was Hayes' drive off Moore's glove to open the fourth. A few more hits followed immediately, but they proved good for only one run. Seeds bunted to Gehrig and beat the Yankee first sacker to the bag. Sullivan hit one hard enough, but Farrell scooped it up and turned it into a double play. This put Hayes on third and he scored when Swanson scratched a single past Farrell. Swanson scooted to third when Appling doubled for the fourth hit of the inning, but Kress ended it in three futile swings.

Grube Assists Yankees.

Jones tumbled into another predicament in the sixth and whatever chance he had to get out of it unscathed was ruined by Grube. Crosetti singled past Hayes and went to third on Glenn's single to right. One was gone when these two hits were made. While Moore was batting, Grube endeavored to pick Crosetti off third, but the throw went wild and the runner went home. Moore then fanned and Kress tossed out Farrell. After this the new champions did nothing with Jones or with Kimsey, who pitched the ninth.

The only Sox hit outside of the fourth inning was a product of Seeds' bat in the ninth. He slapped a single to center with one out, but nothing happened.

Stuhley Signed to Box McCauley on Wednesday

Young Stuhley of Kewanee, Ill., and Dick McCauley of Beaumont, Tex., middleweights, signed yesterday to fight the ten round windup at Northwest stadium on Wednesday.

Johnny Baima, Lawndale middleweight, will battle Freddy Langford, south side Negro, in the six round semi-final. Kid Irish, St. Louis featherweight, and Eddie Meyers of Cincinnati, O., will meet in a four round contest.

An electric score board, the invention of Charles M. Amory of Miami, Fla., will be erected at the Chicago Stadium Sept. 26 when Max Baer, California heavyweight, and Tuffy Griffith of the west side, meet in the ten round windup. The board will be operated by an Illinois athletic commission representative who will designate the winner of each round by flashing a red or blue light. In the event of a draw round, both lights will be flashed. The state commission experimented with the system of announcing the winner of each round at smaller clubs several weeks ago.

Barney Ross, west side lightweight, injured his right hand when he knocked down Frankie Petrolle in the first round at the Coliseum Thursday.

Young Tommy, California bantamweight, yesterday left for Los Angeles, where he expects to box Midget Wolgast Oct. 12.

slapped him on the back with an "O. K., kid, we all make mistakes like that some time."

Mr. Combs Wanted Some of the 50 Grand.

This reassured him and he closed the season of 1923, the year of his bush league debut, with a hitting average of .330 and a total of 359 bases. These statistics figured in the sales talk that separated the Yankee management from $50,000 cash and the heavy hitting outfielder, E. Smith.

When training time came Combs demonstrated that however little reading and writing were done down his way he was no feeble-minded hillbilly himself. He demanded some of the purchase price, refused to report until he got it and since he did report, probably did get it.

That season he broke an ankle, but hit .400 in a limited career and showed the way out to Whitey Witt, the centerfielder, who had figured in the championship organization which Miller Huggins was rebuilding after 1923. Witt disappeared and in 1925 Combs became a regular with the Yankees, speeding up the entire team with his fast stretchy leg work and alertness in the outfield. He also continued to hit and became a star ball player.

He has been paying back the $50,000 purchase price in service ever since, and this year he goes into a world series under the bush league manager who discovered him and condoned his first faux pas in the professional game.

two out and stopped at second on Hurst's single through English. Whitney filed to Cuyler in right center.

Klein Drives In One.

The Cubs couldn't get a run out of two walks and an error in the fourth. Moore walked. Then Grimm tapped to Bartell. Moore was forced at second, but when Mallon tried to make a double play he threw the ball away, Grimm reaching second. Hartnett walked and as Koenig forced Gabby, Grimm took third. Bartell threw out Tinning.

Bartell doubled to center with two out in the fifth and came home on Klein's second single, a smash along the right foul line. Hurst ran the count to three balls and two strikes, then grounded out to Herman.

Not a Cub made a hit after the third until Herman led off the eighth with a single to right. Bill got to second when Klein juggled the ball. English popped to Bartell, but Cuyler singled to center, scoring Herman. Mallon threw out Stephenson, Cuyler stopping at second, where he died when Moore tapped to Bartell.

Koenig Makes Nice Play.

Whitney got to do a little harmless running in the eighth. He singled with one out and, after Lee had popped to Hartnett, stole second and proceeded to third when Hartnett threw the ball into center field. Then V. Davis was called out on strikes.

Koenig made a nice play to retire Dudley, who batted for Mallon in the ninth, but Heathcote, batting for Holley, slammed a double off the wall in right center and scored on G. Davis' single to left. Bartell sent a long fly to Stephenson and Klein forced G. Davis, Herman to Koenig.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 16.—Charley Root, who hasn't lost a game for the Cubs since Ray Benge beat him here on Aug. 5, will pitch the first game of tomorrow's double header against the Phillies. Manager Grimm said he hadn't decided on the other starter, though Pat Malone is a bet. Grimm said he would save Lon Warneke for Cincinnati. Benge and Rhem will go for the Phils.

Lance Richbourg, who left the Cubs in midseason, has been recalled from the Albany club in the International league and will report in Chicago Monday. He will not be eligible for the world series, but may play in the Pirate and Cincinnati contests next week.

The Phillies beat the Pirates 14 out of 22 in their season series, as compared with 5 for the Phils out of 20 against the Cubs. Which is enlightening to those who go in for baseball statistics.

Mark Koenig now dresses his injured wrist in splints while off stage, but during the show contents himself with heavy taping.

Finalists' Records Similar in U. S. Amateur Meets

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 16.—(AP)—The records of Johnny Goodman and Ross Somerville, finalists for the national amateur golf championship, are closely similar in this tournament. Each has qualified only four times and prior to this battle each found the 18 hole early round matches too tough to survive.

Here are their comparative performances in this and previous national tournaments since 1927:

1927—Goodman failed to qualify.
1929—Goodman beat Bobby Jones, 1 up, in first round; lost to Lawson Little, 2 and 1, in second round. Somerville failed to qualify.
1930—Goodman lost to Johnny McHugh, 1 up, in first round; Somerville lost to Bobby Jones, 5 and 4, in first round.
1931—Goodman lost to Billy Howell, 2 and 1, in first round; Somerville defeated Gene Homans, 2 and 1, in first round; lost to Fay Coleman 4 and 3, in second round.
1932—Goodman qualified with 144, second lowest score; defeated H. Chandler Egan, 3 and 2, in first round; defeated Charles Seaver, 2 and 1, in second round; defeated Maurice McCarthy Jr., 1 up, 36 holes, in quarter finals; defeated Francis Ouimet, 4 and 2, in semi-finals.
Somerville qualified with 150; defeated John F. Brawner Jr., 5 and 3, in first round; defeated Jack Westland, 3 and 2, in second round; defeated Billy Blaney, 6 and 5, in quarter-finals; defeated Jess Guilford, 7 and 6, in semi-finals.

BY BOB BECKER.

Can a flying squirrel actually fly? S. E. Perkins of Indianapolis, Ind., lecturer for the National Audubon Association societies, related recently that he saw a flying squirrel really fly from one tree to another by beating its feet up and down in wing manner. This enabled the little animal to fly forty feet through open places.

Discussion of how the flying squirrel either sails or flies came up during a visit to Mr. Perkins' summer home on Lake Maxinkuckee. We arrived just after dark and were urged to enter through a rear door so as to reach the front porch quietly, because a flying squirrel was on a feeding station in front of the house, about 35 feet from the porch.

Throwing the beam of a flashlight on the feeding station, we could make out the outline of the little squirrel enjoying his evening meal. It was then that Mr. Perkins told us of seeing these animals actually fly from one tree to another. There were other witnesses to the animal's feat.

In every description we have read of the flying squirrel's habits the authors credit the animal with the ability to sail through the air from one tree to another. In fact, scientists seem to be agreed on this point.

But Mr. Perkins states that he actually saw one fly. He says he saw an animal start low down on the trunk of one tree and land on another 30 or 40 feet away, forcing its way through the air by flopping its legs.

Win or Lose, Goodman Is King in Omaha

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Slight, tow-headed Johnny Goodman, who went to Five Farms to "shoot the works," was the toast of his home town tonight.

To telephone operators in newspaper offices it appeared that almost every person in Omaha had asked how Johnny was making out in his semi-finals match at the National Amateur tournament with Francis Ouimet. Few events since the signing of the armistice have aroused as much enthusiasm as the defeat of the veteran defending champion and Walker cup team captain at the hands of the little Omahan.

Goodman's life has been almost entirely a story of accomplishment against odds. An orphan kid from across the tracks, he has been caddying and playing since he was 12 years old.

Bums Way To Tournaments.

His introduction to golf came when, with four companions, he walked down the railroad tracks to a hill overlooking the Omaha Field club. The boys watched the players and 12 year old Johnny's eyes gleamed. When he returned home, he found a square wooden block and began socking it around with a crooked stick. A few days later, he was given a caddy's job at the club.

Still a caddie, he entered his first tournament—the Omaha city—in 1925 and won it. Thereafter victories came frequently. Beginning in 1926, he was state tournament medalist for five successive years, winning the title in 1929, 1930, and 1931.

In 1926 Goodman and two caddie pals bummed their way to the trans-Mississippi tournament at St. Louis, where he went to the semi-finals. He won that title the next year at Colorado Springs, where he played in the same clothing he had worn riding the rods from Omaha.

Beats Jones in First Round.

Not until Goodman defeated Bobby Jones in 1929 at Pebble Beach in the first round of the national amateur did he become recognized outside the middle west. Last year Johnny again won the trans-Mississippi at Minneapolis and placed as low amateur in the St. Paul open. In the national open he was low qualifier in the sectional rounds and tied with George Von Elm for second low among the amateurs. In 1930 he tied with Von Elm as low amateur and this year was the only amateur to qualify.

Regardless of the outcome of tomorrow's final match with Ross Somerville of Canada, Johnny will have a parade, a big one, when he returns home. For already he has eliminated from the national amateur three members of the Walker cup squad, a berth on which he has coveted for years.

Cermak's Golf Tourney for Police to Be Wednesday

Mayor Cermak announced yesterday that his annual golf tournament for members of the police department will take place Wednesday at the Chain o' Lakes Country club, near his summer home at Antioch, in Lake county.

Goodman Beats Ouimet; Meets Somerville in Final Today

wavy hair, which had a tendency to fall over his eyes in bangs.

Both wore the conventional, old fashioned bloomers and Goodman had on a white mesh shirt of about the texture of burlap, which exposed him to trouble once when he had to play a shot out from a tangle of bushes with stiff stickers on them as long as horseshoe nails. The stickers jabbed him through his shirt and he ouched very frankly but kept his head down and with a sort of squeezing jab of his niblick popped the little ball up and out to the green through a hole no bigger around than a plate.

They both covered the morning round in 37-35-72 and, if Goodman couldn't move off in front of the expiring champion, anyway, the champion couldn't make him let go, and the match was even when they went to take their victuals in the clubhouse.

Goodman Takes Command.

The difference began at the second hole of the afternoon walk, where Goodman flicked a long iron shot to the green and ran down a putt of about thirty feet as Ouimet used his third to chip back from an overrun second shot. Guilford was still out being murdered at this time, but the witnesses began to withdraw from the gruesome spectacle and you could hear the hoof-beats from afar as they came pounding back to join the throng around Goodman and Ouimet.

Goodman won another point at the fourth hole, a short one, where Ouimet dropped into a trap and left his first putt just teetering on the edge of the cup, for a four.

Goodman Goes 3 Up.

The next mishap to the prestige of the golf association, which thought so little of Goodman so recently, occurred at the sixth, which is the long one with the big red barn, the farm house and the cornfield intruding on the straight line to form a dog-leg. Goodman's drive was out in fair territory, but Ouimet cut the corner with New England frugality and found himself shooting his second from a point very close to the chicken coop, notwithstanding which his second rolled a little beyond Goodman's, however. But when they had pitched up together, Goodman settled it with a single putt for a birdie four and was now 3 up.

About this time I went over to watch the final blows struck in the Guilford murder case and missed a couple of holes, but it says on the scoreboard that Goodman went four up on the seventh and remained four up at the eighth and the scoreboard wouldn't deceive us. At the ninth, which is another short hole about 180 yards and sharply uphill, Ouimet's iron shot was flattened out as it reached the green and rolled twenty yards beyond. Goodman's fell down with a plop and stuck in the plush on the edge. They both took three more to get down.

Ouimet Wins a Hole.

Then Ouimet won back one at the tenth, where Goodman went into a mushy place with his second shot and splashed himself with a sheet of water trying to fish the ball out with his niblick. Ouimet was on in two, so Goodman picked up his ball and let him have one for a few minutes. He took it away on the eleventh, where Ouimet hit a terrible hook with his second and pitched way back over the green with his third, finally using up six.

But wouldn't it cover the case to report that Ouimet gave his final wiggles in winning two of the next three, then went to pieces on the 15th with a trapped drive and a wild third which carried him 20 yards past the green? On the final hole he was trapped again and didn't get out and that was the end of his term as amateur champion.

Somerville Big Fellow.

Somerville, four times Canadian champion, who now plays for the American title, is a big, loose, solemn sort of bloke who looks as if he might not own the price of a bowl of Maryland fish chowder, but turns out to be the heir of a rich insurance magnate of London, Ont., and an executive with a steady working job back home. He played football, cricket, and hockey at Toronto university and has been playing tournament golf for several years, being now 29, but takes the game seriously only on the golf course. Thus he does not play constantly, but concentrating when he does, and in concentrating assumes an expression of deep sorrow and despair.

Somerville had Guilford at his mercy almost from the start. Yet, in spite of his great golf, the statistics reveal he would have been 5 down to Goodman today through the thirtieth hole, which is as far as Somerville had to go to dispose of Guilford.

Somerville's rout of Guilford, who held the championship in 1921, provided none of the thrills of the Goodman match. Big Jess generally had an edge off the tees, but he was so much wilder that extra distance did not mean anything. Somerville was not only much steadier up to the greens, but much more consistent on them.

Six up after the morning round, Somerville won the first two holes of the afternoon before Guilford made any kind of a stand. Somerville clinched the match with five successive winning holes, from the 16th through the 20th, and then shot well enough to discourage Guilford's attempted comeback. Guilford's only winning hole in the afternoon was the 25th.

CARDINALS MEET PACKERS; BEARS PLAY CLEVELAND

Chevigny Makes ProDebut at Green Bay.

The professional football season in Chicago will open tomorrow when the Chicago Bears, for the last two years runners-up in the National league, meet the Cleveland Panthers at Loyola university. At the same time the Cardinals, Chicago's other representative in the National league, will open the league season at Green Bay against the champion Packers.

Tomorrow's encounter will be the first of the year for the Bears and the third for the Cardinals, they having previously beaten the Grand Rapids Maroons and the Aurora All-Stars in practice games. In meeting the Packers, for four years national professional champions, however, the Cardinals will be meeting much stiffer opposition in a game that counts in the National league standing.

Chevigny's Pro Debut.

It will be the first professional game for several Cardinal players and the debut of Jack Chevigny, former star and assistant coach at Notre Dame, as a National league pilot. Chevigny has been drilling the Cardinals in the Notre Dame system for more than three weeks with two practice sessions a day and believes they are destined to be the big surprise of the league.

Coach Ralph Jones expects to start a veteran back field of Keith Molesworth, Red Grange, Dick Nesbitt, and Bronko Nagurski, but there will be several new faces in the line when the Bears meet Cleveland.

Three Big Ten Starts Play.

Tiny Engebretsen, former Northwestern guard; Ookie Miller, Purdue captain and center of last year, and Bill Hewitt, Michigan end, will be playing their first game as professionals. Gil Bergerson, a giant guard from Oregon State, may start the game. Practically the entire squad will be given a tryout some time during the afternoon, Jones said.

Cleveland is bringing a heavy, veteran outfit, headed by Ken Hauser, former Washington and Jefferson full back, who has been playing professional football for nearly a decade.

Scrimmage on Schedule at Purdue Today

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—With only twelve more practice sessions before the opening game with the Kansas Aggies, Coach Noble Kizer sent his Purdue squad through an intensive dummy scrimmage this afternoon. Scrimmage will start tomorrow, Kizer announced.

Preceding the dummy scrimmage, linemen were given a strenuous offensive scrimmage, in which blocking and charging were emphasized. The backs were drilled on offensive blocking.

One of the most encouraging developments of the afternoon was the performance of Roy Horstmann, veteran full back, who appeared to be in the best condition of his career.

During the line scrimmage, Paul Moss and Ben Merz, ends; Capt. John Oehler, center, and Howard Letsinger, guard, gave impressive performances.

IOWA CENTER HURT

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Late arrivals brought the total number of Iowa football candidates to 60 today as Coach Ossie Solem ordered a double session of hard practice.

In the morning Solem sent the Hawkeyes through two hours of punting, blocking, and tackling. Schmidt led the punters. Most of the afternoon was spent in signal and passing practice, with many of the players clad in track suits.

Edward Dolly of Rock Island, Ill., sustained a recurrence of an old knee injury in the blocking practice and was withheld from active work. His absence left only Leon Lande, Benton Harbor, Mich., sophomore, to fill the center position, since Marcus Magnussen is still out of the lineup with a strained back.

MICHIGAN OPENS UP

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Michigan will use an open attack this season, Coach Harry Kipke announced today. This departure from the usual Wolverine offensive of close formations with infrequent passes, is prompted by the excellence of material available, Kipke explained.

Announcement also was made that Capt. Ivan Williamson would be back in uniform not later than Monday. Williamson has not reported for practice, because of a leg injury. Physicians, however, said today he would be in shape by Monday.

MORE OUT AT INDIANA

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—New candidates today swelled Indiana university's football squad to 75 as Coach E. C. Hayes prepared for opening of scrimmage in tomorrow's workouts. Five full teams were organized and put through signal drill.

Ray Dauer and Gene Opasik, veteran quarter backs; Don Veller, sophomore, and Tom Jones, freshman star four years ago, led the teams and added an optimistic note to the questionable quarter back situation at Indiana this year.

Hanley Orders 1st Scrimmage for Wildcats

Preparations for today's game with the freshmen occupied the attention of Northwestern's football team yesterday. Only a half day of practice was held to permit players to register for classes, which start Monday.

Seventy-five freshmen reported to Maury Kent, head freshman coach, yesterday. An additional 25 were expected to report next week. This is the largest freshmen squad in Northwestern's history and augers well for next year's prospects.

With only one day of practice, the freshmen are not expected to offer organized opposition in the first scrimmage of the year today.

After the customary fundamental exercises yesterday Coach Dick Hanley set the varsity to running plays in dummy scrimmage. The procedure occupied much of the drill in an effort to get the plays running smoothly.

BADGERS AVERAGE 185

Madison, Wis., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The University of Wisconsin's football team this year will average about 185 pounds, according to estimates of the first eleven selected by Coach Clarence W. Spears.

Spears took over the favored eleven today, ran the men through signal and shift practice throughout the morning and sent them through scrimmage during the afternoon session.

Only two of these men weigh more than 200 pounds. They are Charles Goldenberg, quarter back, and Mario Pacetti, guard. The others range from about 165 pounds to 190.

ILLINOIS SCRIMMAGES

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 16. — [Special.]—Candidates for the University of Illinois football team went through a light scrimmage today, the first of the season. Many sophomores were included in the lineups of the four teams which participated. Zuppke moved Julius Hoeft, former Chicago high school star, from tackle to end. Hoeft, originally a back, was transferred to tackle in spring practice. Bart Cummings, sophomore end, was another candidate transferred, going to tackle. Al Hall, Champaign half back, who was disabled early last season, may not play this year. Hall's old injury bothered him today and he may decide to concentrate on basketball.

HEAT SLOWS BUCKEYES

Columbus, O., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Four more candidates reported for Ohio State football practice tonight, bringing the total to 65 with three letter men still missing.

The heat again prevented intensive work and the Buckeyes took it rather easy during the afternoon, after devoting most of the morning period to limbering up.

Two sets of first string back field men, each with a center, practiced passing and kicking, one consisting of Dick Smith at center and Cramer at quarter, Oliphant and Keefer at halves, and Wetzel at full back. The other had Nasman at center, Heekin and Carroll at halves, Hinchman at quarter, and Vuchinich at full back.

Ferrall, end; Keefe, half; Kirk, end, and Jones, a half back, reported today.

IRISH SQUAD GROWS

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—The Notre Dame football squad of 110 men called for practice was supplemented today by forty volunteers.

Coach Hunk Anderson sent the squad through a hard drill on blocking and other fundamentals.

Equipment was issued to 275 freshmen who held their first workout today. The date of the annual Frosh-Varsity game has been set for Oct. 1.

Anderson announced the following freshmen coaching staff today: Jake Kline, head coach, and Reigs McNamara, varsity tackle in 1930, and George Kozac, varsity tackle last year, as assistants.

STADIUM MAPS SUIT AS HAWKS LEASE COLISEUM

Announcement by the Blackhawks yesterday that they had signed a contract to play next season's National Hockey league games at the Coliseum brought a reiteration from the Chicago Stadium that legal steps would be taken to forestall evacuation of its arena.

The Blackhawks leased the Coliseum for one season at an undisclosed rental, Charles Hall, owner of the Wabash avenue building, said. No release clause permitting the Blackhawks to move back to the Stadium if they are not upheld in threatened litigation was included in the contract, Mr. Hall asserted.

Sidney Strotz, president of the Stadium corporation, said his lawyers were engaged in determining what course to pursue in the contention that the Blackhawks have signed a lease which binds them to play next season in the Stadium. By Monday the Stadium expects to know what its next step will be.

At the time negotiations between Mr. Strotz and Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Hawks, were broken off, Mr. Strotz said a suit for $150,000 damages would be started if the Blackhawks played in the Coliseum.

Mulleavy, Former Sox Shortstop, Will Marry

Oakland, Cal., Sept. 16.—[Special.]—Gregory Mulleavy, Oakland shortstop, and Miss Doris Marie Giroux, Detroit, Mich., will be married Monday, they announced today. Mulleavy formerly played with the Chicago White Sox.

Zimmer. Sahlin will direct the team.

Veterans from last year probably will be found at the tackle and center positions. William Cassels and John Spearing, now starting their second year, are believed capable of continuing the fine work which characterized their play at the end of the 1931 campaign. Keith Parsons, a senior, who has held down the pivot position for two years, is slated for that same job.

Both Guard Jobs Open.

Graduation of Sam Horwitz and Stanley Hamberg leaves both guards open. Among the talent now drilling is Walter Manelkis, a junior, who was prevented from playing last year by a broken arm. Manelkis is of the rugged type who will stand up well in any competition.

E. J. BLISS Chairman of the Board Explains why

Regal changes its price policy

Reducing Regal Custom Reproductions $5.55

THIS SPRING WE STARTLED THE WHOLE SHOE WORLD by arbitrarily reducing the price of every Regal Shoe in all Regal Stores to three Sale Price Groups—$3.95, $4.65, $5.55. It was the first Regal sale in 10 years.

WE ASKED MORE THAN A MILLION REGAL CUSTOMERS through announcements in 59 of the leading newspapers to pick any shoe they wanted in these three Price Groups and the registered vote recorded by actual purchases in 100 Regal Stores from Coast to Coast was as follows: 42%—$3.95; 7%—$4.65; 51%—$5.55.

THIS NATIONAL SURVEY SETTLED OUR PRICE POLICY. More than one half of our customers (51%) asked us to continue to make the Regal Custom Reproductions for $5.55—and almost one half (42%) asked us to make a Regal Shoe for $3.95. The other scattered votes convinced us that it was not necessary to consider any other price.

THAT PUT THE JOB RIGHT UP TO US TO MAKE A $3.95 SHOE in the Regal factory and comply with the rigid Regal specifications for Style, Quality, Workmanship, Fit and Wear.

WHEN THE FACTORY FIGURED THE COST OF CALFSKIN Upper Leather we specified—Solid Leather Inner Soles—Solid Leather Counters—specially treated Solid Oak Outer Soles—Seamless Quarter Linings, Vamp Linings, etc.—they said it couldn't be done.

BUT BALANCING THE BUDGET IS AN INTERNATIONAL SPORT TODAY. Leather is lower and Labor costs less. We have cut the cost of making the shoe in our own factory and the cost of selling in our stores. We have cut our Salaries and cut our Profits to give you the greatest value ever produced in this new Budget Line for $3.95. And I know that the Regal Custom Reproductions for $5.55 are the finest shoes ever made in the Regal factory.

BY FRENCH LANE.

There is a new champion among the 2 year old fillies of the western turf. Her name is Advising Anna, a daughter of Blondin-Phenicia, and owned by Mrs. Jack Howard of Kentucky, whose first name is Anna. It doesn't take any stretch of the imagination to conclude that Mrs. Howard's husband, who trains the filly, selected the name.

When Advising Anna rolled home three lengths in front in the Petunia purse at Lincoln Fields yesterday, she was making the fourth start of her career. It was her fourth straight victory, and from the way she made a show of such flyers as Miss Brilliant, Gertrude L., and Dominant Miss, she gave the impression she isn't likely to taste defeat this year when racing against the fillies of her age.

First Start 2 Weeks Ago.

Advising Anna is brown of color and extra large. She wasn't hustled along early in the season, so she did not make her racing debut until the Lincoln Fields season opened two weeks ago. But her four victories indicate she is headed straight for the championship. She's an easier going and better looking filly than Gloriatone, which was the best in the division during the earlier part of the season.

Advising Anna's earlier victories had come as a result of her early speed. She didn't use it to the same advantage yesterday, Miss Brilliant and Gertrude L. outrunning her in the early stages.

As they neared the turn in the 5½ furlong race, Advising Anna, which had started from an outside post position, continued to race on the outside but began to fly past the fillies that had been leading her. It resembled one of those famous dashes Equipoise puts on, for it took her no more than a dozen strides to sail into a commanding lead.

Double for Howard Stable.

Once out in front she ran faster than ever. Miss Brilliant made a game late challenge midway in the stretch, but it didn't last long, and soon she dropped back completely conquered. Gertrude L. had just enough left to beat Dominant Miss for third money.

Advising Anna ran the distance in 1:06, which was four-fifths of a second off the track record, which she already holds. Her victory completed a double for the Howard stable, for in the third race Miss Tulsa was in front from start to finish. Both were ridden by Jockey Charles Corbett and each was a top heavy favorite. Miss Tulsa paid $4.80 and Advising Anna was at $2.96.

Most of the daily double players were very smart yesterday. They hooked up Grey Kitty and Miss Tulsa in the combination. The payoff was $37.76.

Hold Two Five Mile Roller Skating Races

Two five mile races will feature the speed events on roller skates in the White City rink tonight. There will be a five mile professional race and a five mile amateur event.

Typhoon, Once a Derby Hope, Drops Dead

Typhoon, one of the best known horses in western racing, dropped dead when he came on the track at Lincoln Fields early yesterday morning for a workout. He was a 7-year-old, and as a 2 and 3 year old gave great promise. He was given a chance in the Kentucky Derby, but finished fifteenth, back of Reigh Count. He showed a better effort in the Preakness, landing seventh, with Victorian as the winner. During the last three seasons he had drifted down to the lowliest plater ranks. He was owned by the Harned Brothers stable of Louisville.

Jockey T. P. Martin was slightly injured during the running of the first race yesterday and was forced to cancel his mounts for the remainder of the afternoon.

The main division of the Shandon farm stable, maintained by Dick and Pat Nash of Chicago, was sent to the Havre de Grace track in Maryland yesterday. The Nash horses will race in Maryland throughout the fall season.

DEPUTIES VOTE FRENCH DEBT INTEREST CUT

Senate Action Likely by Monday.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, Sept. 17.—The chamber of deputies adopted early this morning the government bill for saving millions of francs by converting existing obligations into others bearing a lower rate of interest. It is believed that the senate will act, so the bill will be passed by Monday. The deputies' vote was 540 to 48.

Following the example of Great Britain, the French government introduced the bill yesterday at a special session, affecting 85,692,000,000 francs [about $3,427,680,000] in French government bonds.

All 5, 6 and 7 per cent bonds and like obligations will be reduced to 4½ per cent at par, amortizable in 75 years and tax exempt. No new conversions will be made before January, 1939. Application for reimbursement must be made within six days from the date the law becomes effective.

Hostile Moves Defeated.

When the bill was presented during the afternoon the Nationalist leader, Louis Marin, moved the previous question, and his motion was rejected by 525 to 65, only the extreme Nationalists and communists voting against the government. A similar fate overtook a motion for adjournment made by another Nationalist, Pierre Taittinger.

The chamber then began a general debate. The government spokesmen in urging the adoption of the bill said a great budgetary saving would follow, variously estimated at 1,000,000,000 to 1,500,000,000 francs [about $40,000,000 to $60,000,000].

Features of the Plan.

The main points of the conversion bill follow:

1. The minister of finance is authorized to reimburse 5 per cent of the 1915 and 1916, 6 per cent of the 1920, 6 per cent of the 1927, and 5 per cent of the 1928 obligations, and 7 per cent of the 1927 treasury bonds or to convert them into 4½ per cent rentes, the interest on which shall start Nov. 1, 1932. The total nominal amount of these issues is 85,692,000,000 francs [about $3,427,680,000]. The conversion is to be at par, plus a reimbursement premium on the 6 per cent obligations and the 7 per cent treasury bonds.

2. Exercise of the right of reimbursement by the government is suspended for the new rentes until Jan. 1, 1939.

3. New rentes will be amortizable within seventy-five years' maximum, either at par through drawing lots or by repurchasing on the bourse. The interest will be payable on expiration and semi-annually.

4. All privileges and immunities attached to the 3 per cent perpetual rentes are assured to holders of the new rentes, which also will be exempt from all special taxes imposed on personal property.

5. Holders of the 3 per cent perpetual, 4 per cent 1917, 4 per cent 1918, 5 per cent 1915 and 1916, and 3 per cent 1920 rentes who make the request can obtain in exchange five annuity securities under the conditions detailed in the annexed convention. These annuities will be free of the taxes on salaries and pensions.

6. The holders of rentes, obligations and bonds which are being converted, who, within delay six days from the time the decree goes into effect, have not demanded reimbursement, will be regarded as having accepted conversion.

More Details of Bill.

7. The converted rentes, obligations and bonds will bear interest at the original rate until Nov. 1, 1932.

8. The ministry of finance is authorized to provide for the expenses of operation and reimbursement, which will be demanded either through the issuance of the 4½% per cent 1932 rentes or treasury bonds or bills or through resources placed at the disposal of the treasury by the sinking fund as stated in the annexed convention.

9. Twenty million francs [about [$800,000] will be added to the 1932 budget to meet the personnel, printing and supply expenses of effecting the conversion.

War Loan Conversions in Britain Now Over 9 Billion

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 16. — It was announced that the amount of the 5 per cent war loan which has been converted now totals $9,425,000,000 at par. This includes $175,000,000 converted since the end of the bonus period, July 31. Redemptions applied for total only $440,000,000, or about 4 per cent of the total issue of $10,425,000,000. Holders of the remaining $560,000,000 have not yet taken action British funds were buoyant on the London Stock exchange today and the first time for six weeks the price of the war loan reached par.

Germany Will Have Own Reconstruction Corporation

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—Germany is to have a reconstruction finance corporation, too. The government is preparing a decree through which the corporation will be founded with a stock capital of 20,000,000 marks of which part is to be taken over by private banks. The corporation will take over the frozen assets of banks and give in exchange bills which are to be discounted by the Reichsbank. The banks will thus be enabled to mobilize about 200 millions of their frozen assets.

Staples' Low Cost Favors 'Buying Now'

BY SCRUTATOR.

In the last two months a "buy now" movement has been inaugurated by a number of large industrial companies. Banks and government agencies have been urged to extend more liberal credit to purchasers of raw materials. Sponsors of the movement argue that commodity prices have been thoroughly deflated and, therefore, industry is in position to begin the recovery process.

The strength in commodity prices in the last month or two has given support to these views. Moreover, they also are supported by the long range course of commodity prices in the United States. As the result of studies of prices covering more than 100 years, economists have come to the conclusion that the price level that prevailed between 1910 and 1914 may be taken as "normal." So they give this period a base of 100 in computing index numbers of wholesale prices of all commodities.

Wide Variation Shown.

Computations show that during the last century American commodity prices have been below the accepted normal figure about half of the time. Most of this time they have not fallen greatly below normal, except in periods of extreme depression, while during war and post-war booms they have risen far above normal. The lowest point reached was 66 following the panic of 1893, while the highest mark touched was 244 during the boom that followed the world war.

The longest period of subnormal prices was from 1884 to 1908, when the yearly indices ranged between 68 and 92, and the next longest period was between 1840 and 1852, when the range was from 75 to 89. The longest period of above normal prices was from 1914 to 1932, and the next longest was from 1861 to 1877. Prices became subnormal about 16 years after the civil war began and about 17 years after the world war started.

The essential fact for industry at the present time is that average prices have been below normal throughout this year, with the index number standing at 93 in June. This figure is not greatly above the average that prevailed from 1884 to 1908, and most economists do not anticipate that prices will revert to the low levels of a half century ago.

"Buy Now" Well Founded.

Therefore, the arguments favoring the "buy now" movement appear to be rather well founded on past economic history, as well as being designed to facilitate recovery from depression. Similar statistics are cited by James H. Rand Jr., president of Remington Rand, Inc., in explaining his company's decision to buy immediately $4,500,000 of raw materials.

"Why shouldn't every industry buy commodities now?" he says.

"In commodities alone, if all American industries were to place orders for four months ahead upwards of five billion dollars' worth of goods would immediately be scheduled for production. The necessary facilities are ready.

"We believe the facts alone will continue to encourage buying in almost every line. But there is one more selfish reason which goes beyond all actual facts and yet is as real. When you buy now you kindle a dynamic spark that says: 'Come on now, let's go!'"

AUGUST SALES OF A. & P. CHAIN OFF 15 PER CENT

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company reports sales for the 5 weeks ended Sept. 3 of $79,316,702, compared with $93,931,527 in the 1931 period, a decrease of 15.6 per cent. For the 25 weeks ended Sept. 3 sales were $463,321,997, against $541,173,401, a decrease of 14.4 per cent. Tonnage sales for the five weeks ended Sept. 3 were 3.4 per cent below a year ago and were down 4.4 per cent for the 25 week period.

ITALIAN BANKS CUT THEIR INTEREST ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Sept. 16.—Italian banks, acting under instructions of the ministry of finance, today agreed to a convention for reduction of interest on deposits.

It was officially announced that after Oct. 1 banks may not pay more than 2½ to 3 per cent on short term deposits, nor more than 4 on time deposits. Heretofore the interest rate has not been regulated and varied from bank to bank, some paying as high as 5 per cent.

The new convention reached between the governor of the Bank of Italy, the head of the Bankers' association, and the president of the Association of State Savings Banks, was aimed to make money cheaper and also to divert more funds into industry and commerce.

CANADA HEARS OF ALUMINUM DEAL WITH REDS

MONTREAL, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The Canadian press reported today that officials of the Aluminum Company of Canada were "in effect but not literally" trading Canadian aluminum for crude oil from Russia.

Beyond the admission they were dealing with Russia in an indirect manner, company officials had nothing to say. Published reports said the oil would have to be refined here and put on the Canadian market in competition with Canadian oil companies. There is a Russian tanker here with oil now.

Though official figures were not available it was reported that the arrangement betwen Russia and the Canadian company, in which relatives of Andrew Mellon, United States ambassador to Great Britain, are financially interested, involves close to $1,000,000 worth of Canadian aluminum products, chiefly aluminum wire and cable.

Speculations as to whether the Canadian government would allow Russian oil to be unloaded went unanswered by the Montreal offices of the department of national revenues, which said only Ottawa offices could make a statement.

Bright Spots in the Day's Business News

The Corn Products Refining company told the Illinois Manufacturers' association that August sales were 20 per cent greater than August, 1931.

General level of prices of farm products was reported by the department of agriculture to be "probably little higher than in August."

Production of news print paper in the United States and Canada in August amounted to 237,488 tons, compared with 216,993 tons in July and 253,468 tons in August, 1931. Stocks Sept. 1 were 86,011 tons at United States and Canadian mills, compared with 80,386 tons on Aug. 1 and 81,735 tons on Sept. 1, 1931.

The Annalist has announced that its index of business activity for August "shows an upturn for the first time since last December and the first advance of any magnitude since April, 1931."

A further pickup in bank clearings for the week ended Sept. 14 was reported by Bradstreet's weekly. Returns from 47 leading cities aggregated $4,595,419,000, or 12 per cent above the previous week's total of $4,102,403,000.

The 800 employes of the Reeves Manufacturing company, Dover, Del., will work every day of the week. The four six-hour shifts will be changed to three eight-hour shifts, the company announced, because of new orders for the firm's iron products.

Reports in the broad silk trade indicate a favorable consumer reaction to the new weaves and colors offered for the fall season.

Trade reports say there has been an increase in the demand for window glass and glassware specialties.

Editorially, the Railway Age says statistics of freight car loadings "revealing a substantially larger than normal seasonal increase," indicate a real improvement in general business.

John Wohnsiedler, vice president of the Union Bag and Paper corporation, reported orders "very heavy."

Group Offers Stock in New National Bank

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The new national bank which Brig. Gen. Charles G. Dawes and his associates are organizing to succeed the Central Republic Bank and Trust company will be announced in a few days, according to reports current in the financial district yesterday.

The new bank will have capital of $4,000,000 and surplus and reserves of $1,000,000. The greater portion of this amount has already been subscribed, it is understood.

La Salle street's information yesterday was that 95 per cent of the $5,000,000 had been raised, but this report was described by an official of the bank as slightly exaggerated.

Leaders in Stock Sales.

The syndicate underwriting the stock issue of the new bank is represented to be headed by H. L. Stuart, head of Halsey, Stuart & Co.; Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and Rawleigh Warner, vice president of Pure Oil company.

The organizing committee is reported to consist of Gen. Dawes, Sewell L. Avery, president of United States Gypsum company and Montgomery Ward & Co.; Owen D. Young, chairman of General Electric company; R. E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Philip R. Clarke, president of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company.

All the members of this committee, it is understood, are not necessarily to be directors of the new bank.

To Select Name Later.

Stockholders of the Central Republic will be given first opportunity to subscribe for stock in the new national bank, the name of which has not yet been definitely decided upon.

With the necessary capital now virtually assured the organizers are in a position to approach the Reconstruction Finance corporation for approval of their plans. The latter corporation has made loans to the Central Republic Bank and Trust company, but these loans are understood to be amply secured by collateral.

The new bank is expected to occupy the same quarters as the Central Republic at 208 South La Salle street. The matter of the leases on this space, as well as other leases held by the bank, is reported to have been adjusted to the bank's advantage.

President Clarke of the Central Republic last night stated that the report of the completion of the financing of the new bank was premature. He said that he had no statement to make and would have none for ten days or two weeks at least. A number of important steps remained to be taken, he said.

Pennsylvania Announces Changes in Personnel

The Pennsylvania railroad yesterday announced several personnel changes. J. C. White, superintendent of the St. Louis division, has been named superintendent of the eastern division in Pittsburgh. H. C. Fishor, sion in Pittsburgh. H. C. Fushour, bula division, takes White's place at Terre Haute. G. S. West, superintendent of the Monongahela division, becomes superintendent of the Erie and Ashtabula division. P. W. Sullivan, head of the eastern division in Pittsburgh, assumes West's duties on the Monongahela branch.

CANADA POOL WHEAT NOW OFF 1932 MARKET?

Oct. Option Changed to May, It's Said.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

The menace of semi-governmental holdings to the price structure of the world wheat market has been removed, according to the opinion expressed last night in the grain circles here. That was based on information from Winnipeg that the old Canadian wheat pool is disposing of its future contracts. Coupled with the recent removal of the American farm board's holdings from the market, this means that wheat futures estimated at 90 million to 100 million bushels have "been locked up" and no longer constitute a market menace.

According to reports current in the grain trade yesterday, the holdings of October wheat futures in the Winnipeg market, alleged to be owned by the old Canadian wheat pool and estimated at 50 million to 60 million bu are in process of being transferred into the May delivery. It was said the latter had been taken at 6⅝c premium over the October future.

On Sept. 6 the American farm board, in an official statement, announced that its holdings of grain, which the trade estimated at around 40 million bu of futures, would be held off the market until after the turn of the year.

Part of Pool Holdings Sold.

Rumors that the holdings of wheat futures at Winnipeg would be liquidated were heard early in the week and were a factor in causing the dramatic decline of 3c in the Chicago market on Wednesday. Eastern longs were reported as having unloaded large lines of futures because of that rumor and caused a break from 55c to 52c for the December delivery, with a drop to 51½c the following day, the latter being 8½c under the high of the previous week.

The transfer of the Canadian pool holdings from the October future into the May delivery is regarded by the grain trade as having definitely removed the possibility of either the forced liquidation of the wheat futures, or taking in and paying the 50 million bu or more of cash wheat.

When the Canadian pool experiment, in attempting to advance wheat prices, was abandoned the holdings of cash grain were turned over to J. I. MacFarland of Winnipeg to be liquidated. He sold as much cash grain abroad and to the trade as possible and finally made a deal whereby the cash wheat was taken over by elevator interests in exchange for the futures. Mr. MacFarland, according to trade reports, has been acting in a semi-government capacity.

Cash Interest Helps Pool.

Gossip on the Chicago Board of Trade last night indicated that the tremendous exchange of the nearby for the distant futures was accomplished by the coöperation of the large cash and elevator companies in the Canadian northwest, the latter giving the pool the May delivery and taking the October in exchange. It was understood that the transfers of the futures were to be put through the Winnipeg clearing house last night. This is believed to be the largest trade of this character on record.

It is estimated that at the maximum the Canadian pool holdings of wheat futures were in excess of 80,000,000 bu. Part of that was believed to have been sold in the last month or so. This constituted a heavy weight on the market, as the selling was coincident with tremendous hedging pressure against the movement of the new wheat crop. The latter is officially estimated to be 467,000,000 bu, the fourth largest in the history of Canada, and compared with 284,000,000 bu harvested in 1931.

Wheat Deliveries Doubled.

From Aug. 1 to Sept. 15 deliveries of wheat at interior points in the three Canadian provinces have aggregated 85,976,000 bu, compared with 41,934,000 bu last year, and the deliveries by farmers are now averaging in excess of 6,000,000 bu per day.

Whether the story about the pool had any influence in starting importing countries buying Canadian cash wheat on a tremendous scale early this week was not known to the local trade. In some quarters it was felt that it might have, inasmuch as the possibility of the liquidation of the enormous holding had apparently been eliminated from calculations. During the first four days of the last week it is estimated the United Kingdom, the continent, China and other countries of the world bought over 10,000,000 bu of Canadian wheat.

Has Little Effect Here.

Chicago wheat traders generally either had no information regarding the proposed transfer of the Canadian wheat pool's holdings from the October into the May future or else ignored it, and the report had no effect on the market.

Houses with eastern connections were fair buyers of wheat futures at times yesterday, but ran into considerable local opposition on the bulges. Prices held within a range of around 1c for the day with the close at Chicago showing net gains of ⅛@¼c. The September finished at 49⅝c, December 52⅞@53⅛c, and May 58¼@58⅝c.

There was a marked letup in the foreign demand for North American cash wheat yesterday, following the tremendous total earlier in the week. Sales yesterday were confined to scattered lots of Manitobas. Winnipeg showed strength early in the day, but weakened toward the last on hedging pressure and closed ½@⅝c lower, with the December at 53c in Canadian funds.

Heavy buying of futures at Winnipeg was in evidence at the last by houses with export connections, which checked the break. Liverpool finished ¼@⅝c lower with December at 58⅝c per bu.

Scattered lots of American corn are reported as having been sold for ex-

Illinois Jobs Reflect Gains During August

Employment and pay rolls in 1,002 Illinois factories increased in August over July, according to the monthly report of Howard B. Meyers, chief of the department of statistics and research of the Illinois department of labor. Although the recoveries made were not sufficient to make up the losses from June, they lend weight to the belief that July witnessed the high point of unemployment in this state.

Contrasts with July Drop.

The increase in employment amounted to 2.3 per cent, which served to offset partially the sharp decline of 7.6 per cent which was experienced in July from the preceding month. An increase of 6.2 per cent in pay rolls cut down the loss of 13.8 per cent sustained from June to July.

Although the percentage of increase in Chicago was somewhat larger than in the state as a whole, the improvement shown by factories was not enough to make up the July loss, according to Mr. Meyers' report.

Seven cities of the 15 for which figures were compiled separately showed gains in employment last month while ten reported increases in pay rolls. July's decline continued in five cities, namely, Danville, Decatur, East St. Louis, Peoria, and Quincy.

Chicago showed an increase of 3.9 per cent in employment and 9.1 per cent in pay rolls in 508 factories. Five of the nine main manufacturing groups contributed to the improvement in pay rolls and six to the gain in pay rolls.

Three manufacturing groups showed smaller pay rolls than in July. They were chemicals, oils and paints, printing and paper goods, and textiles.

Metals Group Gains.

An increase of 1.2 per cent in employment and 12.2 per cent in pay rolls was reported by the metals group. The clothing and millinery group reported gains of 9.9 and 86.8 per cent respectively. The sharp upturn in clothing group was due to the return to more nearly normal schedules of working hours.

Other groups reported the following gains for employment and pay rolls, respectively: Furs and leather, 2.2 and 11.9 per cent; food products, 10.1 and 4.7 per cent.

CURB EXCHANGE SUSPENDS STOCK OF 2 COMPANIES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—Shares of Curtis Manufacturing company and Magdalena Syndicate have been suspended from trading on the curb exchange, pending an investigation of recent transactions in those two issues, it was announced today.

Curb officials refused to comment further or state the exact reason why the two stocks are being investigated. However, from unofficial sources it was learned that some irregularity had been going on in the methods in which Curtis Manufacturing had been traded in recently. The stock has enjoyed a spectacular rise from 12½ cents a share to $13 this year. It closed yesterday at 7⅞. Magdalena is one of the "penny" stocks.

Oscar Nelson Tells Saving in Salary for Receivers

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 16.—(AP)—A saving of $7,368,000 was effected for depositors of closed banks through substitution early last year of a salary for receivers in place of the 10 per cent fee, State Auditor Oscar Nelson announced today.

The average salary paid receivers of 342 closed banks, Nelson said, was $198 a month. The total salary item was $842,000. With $82,000,000 liquidated, the receivers under the old fee system would have collected $8,200,000.

The salaries ranged from $25 to $1,000 a month, the auditor's statement said, the larger pay prevailing in Chicago, where the resources of several banks to be liquidated amounted to between $5,000,000 and $11,000,000.

Continental Baking Corp. Reports 6 Months Earnings

LABOR OFFICIAL AND CONGRESSMAN ARGUE ON 'STANDARD WAGES'

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Standardization of all wages with a minimum scale was suggested today by Representative Rich [Rep., Pa.] at a hearing of the Shannon committee, investigating government competition for the house of representatives.

Rich put forward the suggestion as John Frey, secretary of the metal trades division of the American Federation of Labor, complained that private manufacturers seeking government uniform contracts, cut wages below the standard of living.

"We must take the element of private property out of national defense," said Frey.

AUGUST SHOWS INCREASES IN FOREIGN TRADE

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—An increase of $2,158,000, in the value of merchandise exported from the United States in August as compared with July, and an increase of $11,580,000 in imports was announced today by the commerce department The month ended with a favorable trade balance of $18,000,000.

The merchandise exported during last month was valued at $109,000,000 as compared with $106,842,000 in July while the imports were valued at $91,000,000 as compared with $79,420,000 the previous month.

The increase in exports was due to the greater exports of cotton during August when the value of such shipments amounted to $18,112,608 as compared with $15,853,880 the previous month.

The department gave no reason for the increase in the imports but it was pointed out that increased activities in manufacturing probably caused an increase in importations of material.

The department statement showed that during August imports of gold had exceeded exports by $6,103,000 with exports of $18,067,000 and imports of $24,170,000. Silver exports were $443,000 and the imports were $1,121,000.

BOND OWNERS' GROUP ATTACKS 'FRISCO' METHODS

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Charges that the St. Louis and San Francisco railroad was "bled white" and was "unscrupulously divested of working capital in the common stockholders' thirst for dividends" were made in a brief filed in federal court today. The brief is that of petitioners in the pending receivership suit.

The brief set forth the objections of the holders of prior lien and consolidated mortgage bonds to the plan proposed by a reorganization committee.

The railroad is resisting the suit, declaring it will be able to meet maturing obligations.

OIL INDUSTRY FACING CRISIS, AGENCY FINDS

The oil industry, recuperating from last summer's flood of oil in east Texas, again is threatened with relapse. Bradstreet's says. It cannot depend on state or federal intervention to avert the impending crisis, the agency states.

"Its present problems, falling gasoline consumption and mounting stocks," asserts the service, "can be solved only by the thorough coöperation of producers."

New York, Sept. 16.—Stocks drifted lower in quiet trading today. American Can closed at 51, off a point. Allied Chemical at 73, off 1¾. American Telephone at 108¾, off 2¼. U. S. Steel at 39⅞, down 1⅝. General Electric at 17, off ⅝, and Case Threshing Machine at 43¾, off 2⅞ points.

Volume was around 1,800,000 shares, the smallest since Aug. 18. News developments were without special market significance and interest obviously was at a low ebb.

Rail Shares Feature.

Railroad shares featured in the group movements. Assurances by the head of the Railroad Credit corporation that there is little chance of major default for the rest of the year was a point in favor of these issues and enough buying appeared in the earlier hours of the session to boost the leaders from a fraction to as much as 2 points above their previous closing figures. Profit taking and renewed selling for the decline appeared in some volume before the close, however, and the section finished no better than irregular.

While the market expects a drop in car loadings to be reported tomorrow, advance reports are that the dip will show nothing worse than a holiday interruption. On the other hand, it is reported that the losses by individual roads for the week will appear smaller than is often the case over a holiday.

Outside of the carrier section the market had little to offer in the way of distinguished group movement. Public utilities were discouraged by the difficulty American Telephone had in making headway and were generally bullish. From the looks of things Telephone was being subjected to selling attacks. Peoples Gas did better than some of its mates, advancing 2 points on a small turnover.

Oil shares were neglected. With the gasoline season nearing an end, traders in search of bargains are inclined to pass these shares by "on the other side."

Gains and Losses Scattered.

Motor and copper issues followed the trend. Changes among them were fractional as a rule. The final tables found minus signs showing throughout both sections.

Preferred stocks had a pretty even break, about a dozen of the better known issues gaining 2 to 5 points and a dozen or so others sliding off as much or more.

Brokers who could not see the day's dribbling selling as evidence of "uncompleted liquidation" persuaded themselves that the hesitancy of the list was due to the fact that it was going through a process of consolidating its position after the protracted summer advance and the abrupt "corrective movement" of the last two weeks and that resumption of the recovery might be confidently anticipated in the near future.

LIBERTY BONDS, SOME OF RAIL ISSUES ADVANCE

Treasury Policy Helps the First 4¼s.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—General firmness characterized today's bond market. Increased volume reflected better inquiry for treasury issues, which were ⅛ to ¼ point higher.

Speculative rails were a feature with gains ranging from 1 to 3 points. High grade domestic corporate issues shared in the moderate improvement, together with foreigns.

The comeback in speculative carrier numbers was more or less looked for in view of a decline during the past week of from 50 to 20 points.

Liberty 4¼s Higher.

The larger gain in government issues was made by the first Liberty 4¼s on so few sales as to indicate that the higher price represented an automatic writeup due to the passing of the last day—yesterday—on which the treasury could have called the issue for redemption on Dec. 15. The yield basis on which government bonds are sold is figured on the assumption that bonds will be called on the earliest possible date.

The first 4¼s, accordingly, were entitled to sell higher when they graduated over night from a three months to a nine months investment. The advance narrowed the spread between the first and fourth 4¼s to less than a point. New highs were recorded in Liberty 3½s and several other issues.

B. & O. Bonds Advance.

Principal gains in secondary rail bonds took place in such issues as Baltimore and Ohio 4½s, due 1933 and 1960; issues of Alleghany corporation, issues of St. Paul and Missouri Pacific, Frisco 4s, Cotton Belt 5s, Southern Pacific 4½s, Southern Railway general 6s, and others.

Higher prices were paid for most foreign issues, among the leading pacemakers being German 7s, which were within three points of the year's high; Belgian 6s, most of the Argentines, and Japanese 6½s.

U. S. Gold Stock Advances $4,127,400 During Day

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 16.—There was a further gain of $4,127,400 in gold today, resulting chiefly from a further release of earmarked metal. Foreign exchanges were inclined to reaction, although the mark showed unusual strength, reflecting, apparently, reassurance of the German political and economic situation.

Diplomat Tells Hoover of Gains at Cotton Mills

Washington, D. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Charles R. Sherrill, ambassador to Turkey, said today he had reported to President Hoover that the 15 New England fine spinning cotton mills of which he is president have returned to full capacity within the last two weeks.

THE QUESTION.

"To the Editor: This time it is a mortgage holder who requests your opinion about settlement. I have in mind doing justice to both parties. The property is a 2 story brick building located in a good neighborhood, all assessments paid, and in good condition. I hold a first mortgage of $7,000—far too high for the present value. I think at the most the property is worth $8,500 or $9,000. The owner falled to pay 1930 taxes also $120 interest due in May, 1932. However, he paid them up in monthly installments, leaving $30 unpaid. The mortgage comes due in November, 1932. Foreclosure would not be very good for me and would result in a total loss to the owner. My solution is this. Please tell me if it is just and workable.

"I will extend the mortgage for three years, increasing the amount $500 to pay taxes and interest. I will reduce the interest rate 5 per cent, but to protect my investment and avoid foreclosure I want the owner to quitclaim the property to me. I will give him a lease with option to purchase within two years at a nominal rental of $40 per month, which just about pays interest and taxes. Furthermore, I will make a provision that failure to meet the payments of $40 monthly will result in the owner's losing his rights to the property. In this case, the property would belong to me and would cost me approximately $8,500.—N. A."

THE ANSWER.

Our report shows this property to be a 2-flat building, with the owner occupying one flat, and the tenant, an unpaid school teacher having lived there five years, occupying the other. The owner must, of course, secure an income from this building. The present tenant in all probability will pay up back rent, and in view of the circumstances, we believe you and the owner should be able to work out an equitable plan of reorganization. You both must decide what to do about the unpaid school teacher tenant.

If the owner has been prompt in all payments in the past, we are rather inclined to look upon the provision you mention [failure to meet payments of $40 monthly will result in the owner losing his rights to the property] as being too drastic, unless the school teacher's status is changed.

It is to the benefit of all parties concerned to try to work out a deal along the lines you mention, providing the above mentioned clause is tempered with a little more consideration. The owner's ability to continue paying for his home appears to depend entirely upon the school teacher's ability to pay rent. You and the owner will have to work out that problem.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 400; hogs, 6,000; sheep, 2,000.

The hog market managed a feeble rally at the opening yesterday, but soon sank back into the rut it was in at the close of the preceding session. A slight increase in eastern buying was behind the short lived early bulge.

As soon as these orders had been filed, trading was dull again. Buyers rubbed out the 5@10c advance. The extreme top for the day at $4.55 was up 5c, while the general average remained steady at $4.05.

Larger packers waited until prices had receded and bought 3,500 at late quotations, leaving only 2,000 pen holders and inferior grades at the close, the low point of the day.

Receipts dropped off yesterday. Barring Thursday's run, daily offerings have been light, but packers report a slight accumulation of fresh pork in the wholesale trade which has gone down 1@2c in less than a week. This has been a serious handicap in the hog market, because it has limited the buying power of the city butchers and smaller houses that deal mostly in fresh pork.

Cattle Trade Quiet.

Yesterday's clean-up supply of cattle met a quiet trade. There were not enough on the market to change quotations much, but tendency in all but good grades ruled lower. The latter were scarce. Prime weighty steers were absent and quoted as high as any time of the week because of the good demand for topnotchers. They are closing 25@40c above a week ago.

Plainer grades of cattle are closing 25c under the high point of the week, but are still steady to 25c higher than a week ago due to advances scored earlier in the week.

Butcher stock registered a 25@50c advance earlier, but part of this gain has been erased. Canners and cutters are closing 25c higher than a week ago.

Calves advanced early but hit a steep slide later and closed $1.00 under the high point and 50c lower than a week ago. Good 1,180 lb steers topped yesterday's cattle market in the absence of prime 1,300@1,400 lb averages. The bulk sold at $5.25@7.65, with numerous scattered lots of common southwestern grass steers at $4.25@5.75.

Lambs Lower Again.

Lambs sold steady to unevenly lower again, most natives going at 25c decline, while a few of the top westerns held steady. Sorted natives to parkers sold at $5.50@6.00. City butchers handpicked occasional lots up to $6.10, while a string of western range lambs sold at $6.15, the top. A $1.00 break in fresh lamb brought the wholesale market to a new low level and curbed local buying by packers. Top dressed carcasses sank to 13c, the lowest since last December when the bottom for this class touched 12c. Matured sheep and yearling stock sold steady.
